

Dance Held in 'Greek Museum' Polls Open On Monday

Stately columns of revolving light, royal blue walls and ceiling and a huge white lyre combined to form a "Greek Museum" last night at the Interfraternity - Panhellenic Ball. Richard Maltby and his 14-piece orchestra provided a wide variety of music for the beautifully gowned coeds and their escorts who nearly filled the floor of Recreation Hall. Tall white Greek silhouettes between the revolving columns added to the atmosphere. The lyre, also framed in white, was the focal point of the back wall. The red-jacketed orchestra sat in a bandshell covered with gold satin cloth which gave a subdued reflection to the revolving lights. Although the dance floor was almost filled, the number of couples attending could not compare to a similar dance 14 years ago. At that time 1800 couples jammed into the building, according to Donald Sauble, treasurer of the Associated Student Activities.

All decorations for the dance were designed by a New York firm.

SGA officers, class presidents and Assembly members will be elected during three days of voting beginning Monday.

Junior ballots will also include a referendum concerning Block "S" seating in Beaver Stadium.

They will be asked if they object to part of the seats in the senior and graduate student section being turned over to the Block "S" Club.

There are 4000 seats in the section and it is not felt that the Block "S" Club will take any seats needed for seniors and graduate students, according to Lanny Dey, Block "S" Club president.

The polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in Boucke, Sackett, Sparks and Forestry. Polls in the Hetzel Union Building will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on the same days.

Students may vote as follows:

• All students vote for SGA president, vice president and secretary.

• First and second semester students vote for seven sophomore representatives and the freshman class president.

• Third and fourth semester students vote for seven junior representatives and the junior class president.

• Fifth, sixth and seventh semester students vote for nine senior representatives and the senior class president.

• Eighth semester students vote only for SGA president, vice president and secretary-treasurer.

SGA presidential candidates are Richard Haber (U.) and Peter Galie (C.). Donald Clagett (U.) and John Brandt (C.) are running for vice president. Jack Crosby (U.) opposes Susan Sherman (C.) for the secretary-treasurer position.

3 Students Refuse SGA Committee

No appointments to an SGA committee to investigate the political situation have been made as yet, Rules Committee Chairman Jay Hawley, told the Assembly Thursday night.

Hawley said that all three students who had been suggested for membership on the committee had declined.

The students had been suggested by Desmond MacRae, freshman in arts and letters from State College, who had proposed to the Assembly last week that an investigation be made. MacRae presented a petition signed by 761 students to bring a bill up before the Assembly.

Hawley said the Rules Committee felt the appointments should be postponed also, because of the nearness of the SGA elections. The committee felt, he said, that the investigation and the elections would interfere with each other.

In other business, the Assembly approved a recommendation to establish a committee to expand the activities of Homecoming Weekend and to work year-round on improving alumni relations.

The students appointed will work with the Alumni Association and the Athletic Advisory Board which are already working on the problem.

U.S. Sets Into Orbit 1st Weather Satellite

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States yesterday fired into a more than 400-mile-high orbit the world's first known weather observing satellite.

Scientists indicated it radioed back a televised picture of a storm in the American Midwest.

The camera-equipped satellite, named Tiros I, may be the forerunner of a network of robot space stations designed to flash almost instantaneous reports of weather conditions around the globe.

The Soviet Union is known to be interested in using satellites for long-range weather forecasting, but there has been no sign they have attempted to put anything like the Tiros into orbit.

The 270-pound Tiros, appearing much like an oversize hatbox, rode into the skies from Cape Canaveral, Fla., at 6:40 a.m. All three stages of its Thor-Able rocket carrier ignited in succession.

The satellite then broke away and went into a circular orbit close to advance calculations.

Within a few hours, scientists at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration unhesitatingly said the satellite had gone into orbit and, on command from ground stations, had started transmitting signals indicating there is "something good there."

Dr. Abe Silverstein, chief of NASA's space flight projects, said: "We think we are getting signals that indicate pictures of cloud cover."

Players Accept Challenge, Succeed

By ZANDY SLOSSON
William Inge offered directors and actors a strong challenge to involve an audience in the conflicts of the Flood family against themselves and society in his play "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs."

The Penn State Players accepted the challenge and combined the directing talents of Warren Smith, assistant professor of theater arts, and the acting ability of four students in a 9-member cast to provide dramatic entertainment last night.

Inge sets his play in an Oklahoma town during the oil boom in the '20's. The darkness at the top of the stairs in the home of a 10-year-old boy symbolizes the struggles that he and his 16-year-old sister each waged against society, and also the conflicts between man and wife.

Each scene depends on Anne Grant's interpretation of the role of the mother and her ability to present her inner feelings.

Miss Grant carried the play with the help of Richard Gorlow, 9-year-old son of Leon G. Gorlow, associate professor of psychology. Although Gorlow's diction was fuzzy at times, he walked on stage with the assurance of a veteran of the theater.

The third outstanding job of acting was done by Mary Lee Sheftie, who played the role of the mother's sister. She reveals the true life she follows behind her worldly front.

Although Jim French, who played the mother's brother-in-law, was on stage for only one-fourth of the play, he fitted into his role as into an old smoking jacket. French's facial expression (continued on page two)
