Make Believe Air Highlights 'Prince'

By SUSIE LINKROUM
Ass't City Editor and Personnel Director

An aura of make believe enveloped the Penn State's Players' production of Terrence Rattigan's "The Sleeping Prince."

A sophisticated and witty comedy of romance, the play takes place in the fairy tale setting of the Carpathian Legion in 1911. The production, slow in getting off the ground, provided an enjoyable and amusing evening in the final analysis.

18 Seniors Will Lead Processional

A processional led by the academic deans and 18 outstanding seniors will begin the program for Senior Class Day to be held at 2 p.m. tomorrow in Schwab.

The Rev. Samuel Gibson will give the invocation. Throughout the program several addresses will be presented. Dr. Howard A. Cutler, assistant to the vice president for academic affairs, will speak on "The Class of 1960." Ronald Reinhart, class salutatorian, will deliver the greetings and Lois Di Joseph, class valedictorian, will speak on "Los Fortunatos."

Entertainment for the program will be provided by the Pi Beta Phi sorority quartet and the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity quartet. Both groups were winners of the IFC-Panhel Sing quartet competition which was held during Greek Week.

The winners of the award categories for outstanding seniors will not be revealed until the program, when the class gift will also be announced. Theodore Haller, senior class president, will present the gift to Dr. Cutler. Women's and men's class honors will also be awarded during the program.

Following Class Day, a reception will be held on the Hetzel Union terrace. Tickets for the event, which is open to members of all classes, are available at the HUB desk.

Joel Daniels and Clairenell Cowan, as the Prince Regent and Grand Duchess, highlighted the performance. Daniels was more than convincing in his role as the romantic, debonair suitor of a brash American showgirl.

Miss Cowan portrayed admirably the gay yet scatter-brained Grand Duchess, who made her entrances with an elegant swish of her hand and a swift kick of the train of her gown in true Auntie Mame fashion.

Dawn Ritts, who made her first appearance with the Players, played the part of the wide-eyed and supposedly brassy showgirl. Miss Ritts' performance, though not quite on a par with those of Daniels and Miss Cowan's, improved during the play. Her clever lines added greatly to her portrayal.

Jim Andrews, as an aide to the Regent, took the role of the straight man. He played very well the tolerant, sober-faced subordinate who must carry out his master's orders no matter how fantastic they may be.

The costuming in "The Sleeping Prince" was an outstanding feature of the production. It was elaborate and well-adapted to the air of fantasy covering the plot.

The Players definitely gave a smooth-running production of a play that, because its humor depends entirely upon the deliverance of the dialogue, could be very difficult to perform.

No theater-goer could help but chuckle at the Grand Duchess, the antics of the bratty, spoiled Louisa (played by Carolin Myers) and the Prince Regent as he is ruffled by the beautiful but impish and not-too-bright showgirl.

Outstanding Independent Announced

Mary Ann Ganter and Paul Craska were named the outstanding senior independents at the annual Association of Independent Men - Leonides Banquet last night at the Nittany Lion Inn.

Miss Ganter's award as Outstanding Independent Woman was awarded on the basis of her service to the University through activities. Miss Ganter served as vice president pro-tem of Leonides this year.

Craska's award as Outstanding Senior Independent Man was awarded on the basis of his service to the University through outstanding work in AIM.

Other awards presented by AIM were the Outstanding Non-Senior Independent Man Award which went to Philip Haines, past president of the Town Independent Men; the Athletics Award which went to Jay Werner, and the Scholarship Award which was presented to Arthur Furman.

Other Leonides presentations were an award to a member of Leonides Council for outstanding work in the organization and the Leonides Honor Grant scholarship. The first award was presented to Mary Kay Stoker, past treasurer of Leonides and incoming vice president.

The scholarship was awarded to Patricia Hagan, a sophomore in chemistry from Erie, who was recently elected secretary of Leonides.

Blaine Harvey, disk jockey of WMAJ, was the master of ceremonies and Dr. Arthur M. Wellington, professor of counselor education, spoke on "Independents and Independence."

Delta Alpha Delta To Hold Contest

Delta Alpha Delta, women's debate society, will sponsor its annual intramural discussion contest at 7 p.m. next Tuesday and Wednesday in 2 Sparks.

Any sorority or independent women's group or an individual coed may enter the contest. The participants will discuss the topic "Is It Desirable for Colleges to Train Women for Equality in a Man's World?"

The speakers will be judged by the varsity women debaters.

Participants must register before 9 p.m. Monday with Sheila Cohen, chairman of the contest.
