Sisters, Pledges Participate In Preparation for Initiations

By ELLIE HUMMER

If "A lowly pledge am I" greets you when you phone a sorority suite, you'll know that the sorority is having "fun" week for its pledges.

Or perhaps it is called courtesy week, friendship week, or help week. Whatever the name, the main purpose of this time is to give the pledge a chance to develop the concept of sisterhood.

First Meeting Of Jr. Board Will Be Held

The newly appointed Junior Class Advisory Board will hold its first meeting at 8 tonight in 212-213 HUB. All junior Assembly members are invited to sit ex-officio.

Members of the new Board are: Roberta Beatty, Charles Berents, Barbara Brooks, Gene Chaiken, Susan Clement, Charles Di Poppo, Virginia Dugan, Patricia Dyer, Marjorie Ganter and Earl Ger-shenow.

"We Are Coming, Father Abraham," was a recruiting song when Abraham Lincoln called for 300,000 volunteers in the Union Army.

During this period, usually preceding initiation, the pledges of most of the sororities are required to spend their free time in the suite. If a pledge has studying to do, she may spend the time in a sister's room. Often they are sent to fraternities for articles desired by the sisters.

In several sororities, the pledges must crawl into the suite on their knees, may not wear shoes in the suite or may not sit on the chairs. A pledge usually must have candy, matches or cigarettes ready at all times for each sister whom she addresses as "Sister."

The pledges in a few sororities have one or two big sisters for whom they are required to do personal favors such as making beds, ironing and calling them in the morning. In turn, many of the big sisters take their little sisters out for dinner at this time.

Many of the pledges show their loyalty to the sorority by wearing sorority emblems around campus. Large hair ribbons, sailor hats, pledge paddles or sorority cushions are the usual symbols.

Other pledges are asked to make wooden paddles, keys, quills or other emblems, have the sisters sign them and then varnish them for a remembrance of pledging.

In one sorority, the pledges give the suite a thorough spring house cleaning.

However, the pledges in some sororities manage to get back at the sisters. Emptying rooms of all the furniture, tying all the doors shut and throwing the sisters in the showers are all a part of this week for some pledges.

Library Exhibits Letters

By BEV CADES

Original letters, articles and books written and published by Mathew Carey are enclosed in the library cases on the second floor of the library.

The exhibit marks the bi-centennial of one of America's loyal and versatile citizens of colonial days.

Mathew Carey, patriot, philanthropist, politician and publisher, was born in Ireland in 1760. His parents were comfortably established and Carey enjoyed an ordinary education.

At 15, Carey demonstrated an avid interest in reading and in books. He soon decided to pursue a career of printing and of bookselling.

Carey published his first article at 17; at 19 he fled to France to escape English persecution for his anti-Parliament writings.

In France he worked in Benjamin Franklin's printing shop, and ultimately traveled to America. Aided by Lafayette, Carey founded the "Philadelphia Evening Herald" in Philadelphia. Through his paper, he became the foremost molder of public opinion.

Young Carey established "The American Museum," a magazine which featured literary works of American authors. He also founded the bookselling firm of Lea and Febiger which is still flourishing today.

Carey set the type for the first edition of the Douay Bible printed in America. He also fought to initiate copy writing laws.

After seven years in America, Carey became an American citizen. As a citizen, he helped to establish the Hibernian Society for the relief of poor immigrants. Three years later, he helped organize the first Sunday School for adult education in America.

Carey also advocated prison, educational, political and internal improvement reform. His articles concerning canals influenced the construction of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canals.

Additional biographical material concerning Mathew Carey is displayed with his original works.

Indies May Apply For Encampment

Applications are available at the Hetzel Union desk for the Indie Encampment to be held at the Civil Engineering Cabin during Orientation Week.

The one day gathering is sponsored by AIM and Leonides and is open to all interested independent men and women.

Independents, invited members of the administration and other concerned students will meet to discuss the general plans and policies of, and solve the major issues facing AIM and Leonides for the coming year. All applicants will be contacted and given further information.

SCCA Completes Successful Year

The Student Check Cashing Agency, located in the Hetzel Union card room, cashed over 10,000 checks amounting to a total of about $150,000, according to Marcus Katzen, chairman of the board.

The first year's operations of SCCA, which closed Saturday, were termed "very successful" by Katzen. The SCCA closed Saturday to allow for the two weeks needed for bad checks to come back from the banks.

The agency, which was the class project of the Freshman Class Advisory Board of '62 was opened on a loan of $4,000 from SGA Assembly. After a successful six-week trial period, operations of the agency were continued on a permanent basis.

Katzen said the agency will reopen in the fall as soon as matriculation cards are issued.

YOGI BEAR

COMES to LA GALLERIA

Yes, La Galleria will show Yogi Bear to its patrons on our newly acquired giant 12-inch TV screen. We believe that we have one of the few round screen TV's in the area, and no doubt the only one in this area produced by Austin-Healy. Or was it Stewart-Warner, or possibly Warner-Baxter? Oh, but they're sports cars, so it must be a Torlatto-Kornblatt. Looking into our POOR EMIL'S ALMANAC, I see that Torlatto-Kornblatt is actually a kettle-drum-piccolo duo playing at the now defunct BLUE NOTE in Philadelphia from May 13 to May 18. Please don't tell them, it's their first big club date, even if the joint isn't open. But I digress; maybe it is an Austin-Healy.

Besides Yogi Bear, La Galleria has its famous steak at 1.19; unlike the 1.19 steaks found in big cities, this dinner costs us 1.32. You may ask us, "How do you make a profit?" Obviously, volume.
