Block 'S' Membership Call Issued

If you are an undergraduate interested in becoming a member of the flashcard section for the football games next fall — tonight is the time. An organizational meeting for prospective members will be held at 7 p.m. in the Hetzel Union assembly room.

The flashcard section, which is under the direction of the Block "S" Club, will perform card stunts similar to the ones put on at other universities. The routines will be coordinated with the half-time show.

The cards will be marked and distributed by the flashcard committee of the club, and the performance will be directed by row and section captains chosen from members of the flashcard section.

The Block "S" Club has been granted 704 stadium seats for this purpose. President Lanny Dey said that a large turnout will make card stunts more effective and contribute to school spirit at the games.

Persons joining the flashcard section may purchase their badges for 75 cents tonight at the meeting. Each member is entitled to purchase two badges which will permit him and any other undergraduate he may choose to sit in the section and participate in the stunts.

Another call for section members will be issued during orientation week next semester so that incoming freshmen will have the opportunity to participate.

Town to Celebrate Armed Forces Day

By KARIN MILLER

Armed Forces Day, using the theme, "Power for Peace," will be observed in State College today.

A parade is scheduled for 7 p.m. and will move on College Ave. from Shortlidge Rd. to Burrows Rd. Dr. Howard A. Cutler, assistant to the vice president for academic affairs, will act as parade marshal.

Units from the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC detachments at the University as well as community organizations will participate in the parade.

The Air National Guard will hold an open house from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Armory on the University Farms. Radar and other communications equipment used by personnel of the 112th Aircraft Control and Warning Flight will be demonstrated.

A series of military films is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. to 4:55 p.m. in the Hetzel Union assembly room. The ROTC detachments four areas of specialization: News, advertising, programming and production.

Students interested in news or advertising will enroll in the School of Journalism; those choosing programming will enroll in the Department of Speech, and production arts will be handled by the Department of Theater Arts.

Sixteen hours of "core" courses in basic broadcasting and communications will be required of all students, regardless of specialization. The remainder of the 32-38 credit major requirement will be taken in the field of specialization.

The new major was developed and studied by the independent University Broadcasting Committee, chaired by H. Eugene Goodwin, head of the School of Journalism, and consisting of members of the Departments of Journalism, Speech and Theater Arts.

"This is an unusual approach to such a curriculum as it seeks to take advantage of the common foundations of broadcasting found in each department," Goodwin said.

According to Goodwin, the core courses have been designed to give a broad understanding of the responsibilities inherent in the field of communications, while the options give preparation in professional specialization.

The broadcasting major also requires that students satisfy the basic requirements for graduation from the College of the Liberal Arts.

The broadcasting Major Committee was appointed in March 1959 by Lawrence E. Dennis, vice president for academic affairs. At that time the committee was asked to develop a cooperative, interdepartmental major in radio and television broadcasting, Goodwin said.

The committee will continue to operate as an administrative and coordinating body.

Under a change in graduation requirements in the College of the Liberal Arts, the Senate also decided that the 6-credit philosophy requirement may be satisfied by taking either philosophy 1 or 12, and philosophy 2 or 3. Previously philosophy 1 and philosophy 2 or 3 were required.

have also arranged displays for the card room of the HUB. The displays will be open to the public from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. today and tomorrow and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday

The Ordnance Research Laboratory will depict the latest in anti-submarine warfare equipment. The Navy ROTC students will have on display models and pictures which support the Navy exhibit.

Other displays will be from Lockheed Aircraft and the Atomic Energy Commission.

A STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES

Lion's Paw, Inc., representing 600 alumni of the senior honor society, herewith joins its undergraduate chapters, incoming and outgoing, in a public statement of principles designed to clarify the position of this organization on the campus and at the same time to pledge its continued interest in, and dedicated service to, those programs and policies which it believes will best help The Pennsylvania State University achieve its destiny as one of America's truly great universities.

Like other organizations of its kind on this and other campuses, Lion's Paw is self-perpetuating. To each retiring chapter is accorded the privilege of naming those seniors it deems best able and most willing to serve selflessly and with clear conscience the best interests of the University-at-large. Members traditionally are chosen for their leadership potential and/or because of the positions of responsibility they hold. Purpose of the organization is to provide members with opportunities for discussion of problems common to the officers of student organizations; to gain from the wisdom of group judgment; and to join in devoting themselves to projects which in all humility they believe will contribute to the betterment of the University as a whole.

Because it enjoys no privileges and exercises no prerogatives in conflict with this high purpose, Lion's Paw endeavors quietly and democratically to advance those causes in which it believes and to oppose with equal vigor those proposals which it considers to be contrary to the best interests of students, faculty and administration. Membership in the organization is based primarily on character, dedication, and achievement, or any combination of the three. In accepting membership no initiate is committed to any course in which he does not believe, nor is he asked to set aside his own personal convictions nor subscribe by ballot to any issue upon which he may be at variance with his fellow-members.

Lion's Paw does not publicize its activities because it is not seeking recognition; it does not enforce unit rule; and it meets privately because the discussions would lose the vital element of frankness if open to the public. It exists as an organization only to provide continuity of the idea from year to year; to perpetuate its tradition of service to Penn State; and to limit membership to an effective group size, made up of men who are compatible and who enjoy mutual respect.

It is apparent that such a group will always be open to misunderstanding and attack by anyone who wishes to gain advantage by insinuation, but the fact that its members are drawn largely from students elected to high office by their fellow students should demonstrate the integrity of the group. It does not have, and never has had, any obligation to any person or group to carry out any predetermined program or policy. It has been dedicated for more than 50 years to what it believes is best for Penn State.
