Elementary Classes To Be Televised

About 100 children, ages five to 12, are participating in special elementary classes which will be televised for observation by student and adult education classes at the University during Mid-Session.

An Instructional Improvement Workshop for teachers, supervisors and principals studying curriculum problems will use the elementary classes as a laboratory for working with the class instructors in special fields.

Results of research will be utilized and demonstrated in significant curricular work with the children in music, science and the language arts.

Interpreting--

As the Communist economy progresses toward maturity, these and similar methods will produce threats in other fields. By them, the Communists seek to establish economic and then political dependence.

Their economic capacity is under central control, a weapon which can be directed at will against free world weak points, and especially against the independence of fledgling countries.

Until free economies are mobilized so they also can bring to bear their full strength, the Communist expansion which began after World War II will continue.

If they are, then another president, in the year 2000, may be justified in reiterating the Eisenhower challenge.

'Twelfth Night'

Leslie Preston is as beautiful as the role of Olivia demands. However, as an actress she is not very successful. Her portrayal lacks emotion and is completely unconvincing.

Poor performances by Scott Webster as Viola's brother and Paul Dana as his friend Antonio also hurt the production. Neither seems to realize who they supposed to be.

The costumes by Ann Keely and Vincent Scassellati are richly colored and do much to enhance the production. Especially charming is the green plumage which Sir Andrew sports atop his carrot colored hair.

"Twelfth Night" will continue nightly at the playhouse at Neff's Mills until Saturday, Aug. 6.
