

82 Nation Summit Disarmament Talks Proposed By Russia

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Soviet Union proposed yesterday a summit conference on disarmament of 82 U.N. members at the General Assembly opening Sept. 20. While heads of all governments would be invited, the emphasis would be on the big powers.

At the same time the Russians turned down President

Eisenhower's proposal that the UN Disarmament Commission, also made up of all 82 member nations, be called into session as early as possible this month in advance of the Assembly.

Soviet Ambassador Platon D. Morozov, acting UN permanent representative, made Moscow's views known in a letter to Ambassador Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico, Disarmament Commission chairman.

Padilla Nervo has suggested in a letter to all commission members that it meet on Aug. 15.

He sent the letter after conferring informally with delegates on U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge's call July 22 for a commission meeting. Lodge accused the Soviet Union of breaking up the East-West negotiations in Geneva, and said the commission should have an opportunity to consider the situation now confronting the world on disarmament.

There was no immediate reaction from Lodge, who was designated by Eisenhower to present the U.S. position to the commission. Lodge, the Republican vice-presidential candidate, will resign his post as chief U.S. delegate the United Nations after presenting the U.S. case.

Morozov declared that in order to have successful disarmament talks they must be held on the proper level.

"The Soviet government believes that personal participation on the heads of government of member states of the United Nations in the discussion of the disarmament problem at the General Assembly would answer this purpose best of all."

Howell to Attend Geophysics Forum

Dr. B. F. Howell, Jr., head of the department of geophysics and geochemistry, is attending the twelfth annual triennial assembly of the International Union of geophysics at Helsinki, Finland, as an official U.S. delegate of the National Academy of Sciences, National Research Council from July 25 to August 6.

He will read a paper entitled "Absorption of Seismic Waves in Rock" before the International Association of Seismology and Physics of the Earth's Interior.

Two other members of the faculty attending the assembly are Dr. Leonard F. Herzog, assistant professor of geophysics, and Dr. Charles L. Hosler, associate professor of meteorology.

String Group To Present Last Show

The final concert by the Claremont String Quartet for this summer will be presented tonight at 8 in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

The concert will open with Quartet in F major, K. 590 by Mozart. It will continue with Schoenberg's String Trio and after the intermission the program will close with Quartet in F major, opus 96 (American) by Dvorak.

Since their beginning in 1953, the quartet — violinists Vladimir Weisman and Marc Gottlieb, cellist Irving Klein and William Schoen, viola — have dropped all outside activity. They have already made several nation-wide tours, and recorded for three record companies.

After tonight's concert, they will go to the Vancouver Music Festival before taking off on a world tour which will fill their schedule till next spring.

The first stops are planned for Hawaii and Australia. Afterwards they will travel across Asia and Europe. On reaching the U.S. again, they will make a cross-country tour, winding up on the West Coast some time next spring.

New Conferences Attract Persons To Campus Study

Five new conferences will bring about 745 more persons to campus this week.

The Summer Alumni College and two workshops started yesterday.

The Summer Alumni College will enroll about 100 alumni this week for selected liberal arts courses as part of the continuing liberal education program. Next week another 100 alumni are expected to attend a week-long leadership conference.

A workshop for cooperating teachers in vocational agriculture and a dairy bacteriology short course also started yesterday.

A greenhouse florists conference was expected to increase the campus population by 400 from today till Thursday.

Another 175 persons are expected for the art education conference graduate club Friday and Saturday.

Murphy Named Asst. Dean of Men

Raymond O. Murphy, former counselor coordinator for all men's dormitories on campus, has been named assistant dean of men and will direct the residence hall counseling program.

He succeeds Dr. William B. Crafts, who resigned earlier this summer to accept the position of dean of men at the University of Pittsburgh.

Murphy's job responsibilities will be the same as those of Crafts and he foresees no big change in the system.

He said the biggest problem this year will be setting up counseling and men's self-governing and judicial systems in the new Pollock

Dyer-Bennet Will Give Folk Music Program

By MIKE CORRADO

Richard Dyer-Bennet, musicologist, composer and singer of folk songs, will present the second Artists Series program of the summer at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Pavilion (formerly called the ice skating rink). A stage and chairs will be set up for this, the first presentation under the large roof of this new facility.

In the event of rain the concert will be changed to Schwab Auditorium. There will be no charge for admission and tickets will not be needed.

TENOR AND GUITARIST Richard Dyer-Bennet, who will present a program at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Pavilion (formerly the ice skating rink). The program is sponsored by the Artists Series and is open to the public without charge.

Accompanying himself on the Spanish guitar, Dyer-Bennet will sing a selection of his repertoire of more than 600 traditional English and American folk songs, songs from other lands and a few of his own compositions.

Because of the extent of his work, the world famous tenor has been able to include ballads from the time of the battle of Agincourt to World War II.

At ease with many languages, he has not limited himself to America and the British Isles, but reaches as well into foreign heritages for his stock. He is also interested in the rarer art songs of the great composers and includes some of his own ballads relating to present problems.

Born in England the descendent of one of England's noble families, Dyer-Bennet was raised in California and educated at the University of California at Berkeley.

During his undergraduate days the young man was divided between a career in professional soccer and the life of a concert singer.

For a while he thought he could combine them. His plans were changed when, in a soccer game, an opponent hurtled into him and broke his nose.

Realizing that future injuries of this sort could permanently ruin his singing career, he devoted himself entirely to voice study with Mrs. J. W. Beckman.

With the encouragement of his teacher, Dyer-Bennet journeyed to Sweden to hear the ancient troubadour, Sven Scholander. Deeply impressed, he set about developing a repertoire of his own in the then undeveloped field of American and English ballads and folk songs.

Received first, oddly enough, by the night clubs of New York, his fame spread rapidly after his initial appearance at Town Hall in New York in 1944. He was soon well known to audiences from coast to coast.

His appearance here is part of Dyer-Bennet's annual American tour under the management of Impresario S. Hurok.

Marbut Leaves For Jamaica

Dr. Frederick B. Marbut, professor of journalism, left this week for Kingston, Jamaica, Federation of the West Indies, where he will teach a short course in journalism for British West Indies journalists.

He will return to the University September 15.

The short course is offered by the Federation in cooperation with the University College of the West Indies and the International Educational Exchange Service of the United States State Department.

Students of the short course will include members of the newspaper staffs on the islands of the British West Indies.

Professor Marbut, a specialist in history and law of journalism, and the Latin American press, has lectured in Ecuador, Venezuela, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay and Bolivia in recent years.

Free Movie Tomorrow

The movie "A Night to Remember" will be shown tomorrow at 9 p.m. on the HUB lawn. The film, in black and white, will star Kenneth Moore. There will be no admission charge.

Current Stage Plays Begin Second Week

Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" at Mateer Playhouse and "Private Lives" at Boal Barn are both being presented for the second week to area theatregoers.

Mateer Playhouse's production of "Twelfth Night," considered one of Shakespeare's funniest and most racy comedies, is under the direction of Max Fischer. It will be presented daily at 8:40 p.m. until Saturday, August 6.

The story tells of a twin sister and brother, Sebastian and Viola, who are shipwrecked near the country of Illyria and of the people they meet there. Confusion arises when Viola decides to masquerade as a boy.

Featured in the cast is Patricia Thompson as Viola and David Frank as the boisterous drunkard, Sir Toby Belch. Leslie Preston plays the part of the mysterious and alluring Lady Olivia and Ronald Bishop as her pompous steward, Malvolio.

Noel Coward's comedy "Private Lives" will continue its run Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at Boal Barn, Route 322 in Boalsburg.

It is the story of a fashionable young man who travels to the Riviera for his honeymoon only to find his former wife also honeymooning in the same hotel in the adjoining room. He begins to have doubts on the wisdom of his divorce with comic results.

The young man, Ellyot, is played by Jon Barrie Wilder, his former wife, Amanda, by Marion Glass, his present wife, Sybil, by Ruth Yeaton, and Amanda's husband, Victor, by Glenn Scheffer.

Rev. Brouse to Lead Discussion Thursday

Rev. Paul Brouse will speak on the topic of "Liturgical Renewal in the Church: Reform or Mere Form?" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Lutheran Student Center, 418 West College Avenue. All students are invited to attend.

Timetables on Sale

Timetables of courses offered during the fall semester are now on sale at the main Hetzel Union desk.
