

REWARDS AFTER THE LONG WAIT—Choice seats in Archibald Stadium were available this morning to those hardy souls who stayed up all night or to the pledge who held his place in line.

Pledges Camp Out, Avoid Ticket Rush

By DICK LEIGHTON

The Nittany Lion beamed brazenly into the five o'clock mist, as if daring the huddled students to go home. Yes, it was the morning after the night before the Syracuse tickets went on sale, and 17 pledges were waiting patiently to buy tickets for their slumbering fraternal masters.

This Thursday, the pledges, equipped with cots, blankets, radios, sweatshirts, snacks, and last minute encouragements from the brotherhood, began to gather outside Rec Hall at 6 p.m.

The usual procedure adopted is to form a series of hourly shifts in which pledges simply relieve their brother-underlings every 60 minutes, and if the class is large enough, a pledge has to brave the elements for only one shift. Unfortunately, due to a small pledge class or some other adversity, many young men spend much more than an hour.

At 5 this morning, the ticket entrance to Rec Hall was ornamented by three cots with students bundled into them, an assortment of bodies lying on the ground buried in blankets, and five or six loitering young men idly chatting.

At the head of the line, with a foreign car's front seat for a pillow a battered blanket for a cover, and the whole of the front step for a mattress, slept a member of the first-to-arrive pledge class. Steven Sussman, a sophomore in business administration from Mount Vernon, N.Y., had the distinct honor of representing Beta Sigma Rho. The only drawback was that he and his partner had not been relieved since 11:45 p.m. the previous day.

At 5:30 a member of the physical plant opened the door and everybody shuffled upstairs. There were now nine fraternities represented.

Once in the well lit hallway, the group seemed to liven up. A ukelele was brought out, and a half-hearted rendition of "Old Man River" was struck up. Due to a seeming lack of response, the ukelele was put away and replaced by an old fashioned joke fest.

At 7 the appearance of three coeds briefly livened up a dying spirit, but due to some unforeseen arrangement, the young ladies decided to go to the HUB for coffee.

At 8 the ticket windows opened, and in less than one hour approximately 200 tickets were sold.

As a pair of pledges were walking out of Rec Hall, stacks of tickets in hands, one said to another, "When do the Pitt tickets go on sale?"

Blue Band Gets 120 New Members

One hundred twenty students have been selected for the Penn State Marching Blue Band. They will make their first appearance in uniform at the Homecoming Game on Oct 1, under the direction of James W. Dunlop, professor of music education.

Fraternity--

The important event which requires fraternity-sorority participation in the spring semester is Spring Week.

One of the most important functions of the fraternity is to provide the campus with its social life. At least one party at each house is held every weekend. These may be jam sessions, costume parties, dances or dinners.

Usually on one or two of the Big Weekends, a fraternity will have its own formal dance which is an annual event at the house.

Sorority--

(Continued from page three) strongly emphasized. The blue-book files and help from other sisters are always available to the sorority woman. Each semester a trophy is awarded to the chapter having the highest average.

However, sorority life is not all work and study. A means of improving the coed's social life is given at the sorority-fraternity socials. These socials, which often include dinner, also provide a way of promoting Greek friendship and unity.
