

Cabinet Will Investigate SGA Budget

By KAREN HYNCKEAL

The Student Government Assembly budget, which for several years has been unanimously and unquestioningly approved, may be in for a re-vamping this time.

SGA Cabinet decided last night to investigate the budget thoroughly and consider redistribution of the funds. Until this investigation has been completed, the budget will not be brought before the assembly for approval.

The Student Government receives its budget from fees paid by each student every year. SGA then decides how this money will be spent. For example, certain officers and committee members on the assembly and other organizations receive compensations for their work.

"But often there are students who are doing important work on campus who are not compensated at all," Richard Haber, SGA president told the cabinet members. "And vice versa, too," he added.

Haber said that he hoped that if SGA made the initial move to investigate its budget, other campus organizations would do the same.

He suggested that more money be put toward activities and scholarships which would benefit the student body as a whole rather than such a small percentage.

The cabinet cited as one example of what might be a misuse of funds the fact that while SGA committee chairmen received compensations, the presidents of WSGA, Leonides and IFC do not.

Cabinet also said that often, at the end of a school year, there is no account of how money was spent by the different organizations.

Originally, the budget was to be brought before assembly for approval tomorrow night but cabinet decided to wait until the investigation is made.

Finalists Selected In Queen Contest

Over 200 students saw five finalists for the 1960 Homecoming Queen selected last night in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

The finalists and their sponsors are: Janey Bernreuter, junior in arts and letters from State College, Kappa Alpha

Senate to Hear Attendance Rules

The University Senate will consider a proposal to eliminate all University regulations on class attendance from the Senate Regulations for Undergraduates, at a meeting at 4:15 p.m. tomorrow.

The proposal, sponsored by Monroe Newman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Student Affairs, if adopted, would eliminate the procedure of granting students excuses for illness, athletic events, religious observances and other reasons that cause absences from classes.

Eleven semi-finalists were selected from the original 50 coeds who competed last night. Each contestant walked across the stage, told her name, number, and an interesting fact about herself. The semi-finalists were then selected on a point system based on appearance, poise and personality. Each of the semi-finalists was then interviewed and the five finalists selected on the same point system.

Judges for the contest were Harold O'Brien, assistant to the dean of liberal arts; Ross Lehman, editor of the "Alumni News" and George Donovan, co-ordinator of student activities.

The 1960 Homecoming Queen will be selected by the football team Friday night at the Nittany Lion Inn. She will be presented (Continued on page eight)

Campus Party Hits Closed Membership

Limiting membership in a campus political party to either Greeks or independents cannot best serve the interests of the student body, according to a statement issued last night by the Campus Party steering committee.

The Liberal Party, which became the third campus political party Sunday, has heard a suggestion that its membership be limited solely to independents.

Desmond MacRae, junior in arts and letters from State College, made the proposal because "out of the 41 Student Government Assembly seats, only one is held by an independent." He cited better organization among Greeks as the responsible factor.

The Campus Party statement continued saying: "We feel that thus dividing the student body would cause the issues of any campaign to be clouded in petty rivalries" between these groups.

"Student elections would then turn into nothing more than contests between Greeks and Independents to get members of their respective organizations to the polls," the statement said.

Dennis Eisman, Campus Party vice chairman and drafter of the statement, said he attended the Liberals' first meeting. He said the group suggested nothing constructive, their attitude being "mostly negative instead of positive."

The party statement also said, "We are a party of open membership and not closed to any student of this University because of affiliation to any organization."

"We invite," the statement continued, "or better yet implore all students interested in better student government to attend our meetings beginning next month."

"The only necessary requirements of joining our party are first, willingness to fight for the interests of the students of this University and secondly, a matriculation card," the statement concluded.

One party member said the Liberal Party tag was a misnomer, adding that Campus Party's open membership policy "makes us more liberal."

Clouds, Rain Expected Today

Two storm systems which are converging on Pennsylvania will bring cloudy skies and occasional rain to this area today, tonight and tomorrow.

One of these storms will be moving towards this area from the southeastern states and it is accompanied by abundant moisture and precipitation.

The other system is located a few hundred miles off the Virginia coast and will help provide the triggering mechanism for the precipitation in Pennsylvania.

Cloudy skies and somewhat cooler temperatures are expected today with periods of rain. The maximum reading will be near 66 degrees.

The rain will continue tonight and tomorrow with mercury readings remaining on the cool side of the temperature ledger.

'K' Wants Neutrals In Arms Debate

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Nikita S. Khrushchev proposed yesterday to bring neutralist nations into world disarmament negotiation, but the United States received his bid with deep skepticism.

The Soviet premier's proposal was regarded as a new bid to impress the neutral nations in view of obvious defeat in his attempt to gain their support for his proposed overhauling of the U.N.'s peace-making machinery.

At the same time, strong neutralist pressure to bring about a fresh start on East-West disarmament talks was underscored by a proposal from Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic that President Eisenhower and Khrushchev get together and clear a path for resumed talks on arms. The Nasser proposal, however, seemed foredoomed.

These were the highlights of another day in the memorable 15th session of the General Assembly. As the day ended, the spotlight swung momentarily back once again to Latin America.

Two Latin American governments laid before the assembly charges of interference by Cuba's revolutionary regime under Fidel Castro. Guatemala charged Cuba was helping prepare an invasion to overthrow its present government. Paraguay complained the Cuban regime is propagandizing there for revolution.

The complaints followed Castro's marathon speech Monday in which, among other things, he called for revolt all through Latin America and violently denounced the United States.

To Castro's cascade of charges, the United States — through Ambassador James J. Wadsworth — replied with deliberate calm, expressing confidence in the mutual esteem of the Cuban and American people and promising a document answering all Castro's charges in detail.

Coordinator To Check Publications

George L. Donovan, coordinator of student activities, said yesterday that he will be checking all publications on campus to make sure that they are supervised by a board of directors.

Donovan said this would be done in accordance with rule Y-8 of the Senate Regulations which states that "the direct supervision of the operation of WDFM and of each major student publication shall be vested in a board of directors to be composed of responsible students and faculty members. The method of selection of this board shall be specified in the charter which authorizes its formation."

"Certain publications definitely have such boards," he said, "such as Collegian and La Vie. There are others, among them Froth, the Farmer, and the business administration publication, of which I am not sure."

This checking will be going on all week, Donovan said. Publications which violate the Senate ruling will be asked to comply.

News Candidates To Meet

A meeting will be held for all women candidates on the news staff of The Daily Collegian at 7 p.m. tonight in 9 Carnegie.

All men candidates will meet at 7 p.m. tomorrow night in 9 Carnegie.

375 Tickets Remain For Moore Reading

Approximately 300 student tickets remain for "Marianne Moore", the first University Artists Series presentation for the 1960 fall semester.

Miss Moore, a noted American poet, will appear at 8:30 tonight in Schwab.

The tickets for students are issued without charge upon the presentation by the student of his activity card while other tickets are sold for $1.25 each.

There are about 75 non-student tickets left at the Hetzel Union desk. Student tickets may not be used by non-students.

The Artists' Series Committee has also reminded patrons that no seats for the programs are reserved and requests that patrons do not attempt to hold seats for friends.

Miss Moore was born in St. Louis, Mo. She is a graduate of Bryn Mawr College.

She has auburn hair and the glowing complexion, that often accompanies it. With her dark eyes and speaking ability Marianne Moore is a striking person, said Mrs. Nina Brown, administrative assistant in charge of the Artists' Series.

From all reports, Miss Moore is quite a character and very entertaining. Mrs. Brown added. Miss Moore writes in free verse, Her first poems appeared in Bryn Mawr College publications in 1910. In 1933, she was awarded the Helen Haire Levinson Prize and since that time has been presented nearly all of the awards available in the field of poetry. She held a Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship in 1945 and her book "Collected Poems" won her the Bollingen Prize of the Yale University Library, the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize in 1952. The National Symphony Orchestra will perform Oct. 9 in Recreation Hall. The noted violinist Jaime Laredo will be featured in this forthcoming production. Leon Fleisher will appear Oct. 19 as the third Artists' Series attraction. Fleisher is making his second appearance at the University. He first performed last year on campus with Leonard Rose, violinist.
