

Registration to Be Held For Adult Ed Programs

State College residents may register for adult classes and informal instruction in home and family living and in the recreation program.

Registration will be held from 7:30-9 p.m. today and tomorrow in the State College Junior High School at the W. Fairmont Ave. entrance.

These classes are organized to help individuals learn the latest methods in these fields resulting from recent research. Courses in the areas of family relationships, management and self improvement are planned with this in mind, and courses in sewing, crafts and foods will also include the "why" in order to provide new information of value both to the individual and the family. Recognized experts in their fields are hired to provide this information and to teach the classes.

One unique feature of the program is the participation of students from the College of Home Economics as "student teachers." This enables them to learn how to work with adult education classes and to become better acquainted with residents of State College.

Late registrations will be accepted where there are openings through Oct. 14, and there will be opportunities to visit classes throughout the year to learn more about the program if the instructor's consent is obtained in advance.

Most courses will meet one night a week beginning next week. The fees for each class are indicated in the program and are necessary in order to cover in part the cost of it. There will be an additional fee, varying from one to five dollars, for those participants residing out of the College Area School District. This established program, cooperatively planned, is sponsored by the State College Area School Board and supervised by the College of Home Economics.

2 Councils Start Plans For Year

Paul M. Althouse, assistant director of agricultural research, last night explained the consolidation in the number of curriculums in the College of Agriculture which took effect this fall.

At the Agricultural Student Council meeting, he gave members specific information on the two curriculums, agricultural and biological sciences and landscape architecture, which replaced the 22 former ones.

All freshmen this year have entered either of the two freshman year programs designated as Program A and Program B, and will choose their major field of study at the end of their freshman year.

Althouse was asked to speak to the council when it was discovered that many students did not fully understand this change and wanted more details which they could carry back to their clubs and groups.

The Liberal Arts Student Council in their first meeting of the year initiated action on several measures passed last spring.

At that time it was decided to place a bulletin board on the ground floor of Sparks. The purpose of the board will be to bring the liberal arts students into closer contact with the workings of the council and the school.

A newsletter which will serve a similar purpose will also be sent to all students in liberal arts. Other issues discussed but which council decided need more inquiry were pre-registration of seniors and a broader program of the Junior Year Abroad.
