

25 Students Enroll In New LA Major

By LOIS HAEGLEY

With an enrollment of 15 freshmen and 10 upperclassmen the new major in broadcasting is off to an exceptionally good start, according to Marlowe Froke, assistant professor in the School of Journalism.

Broadcasting is being offered by the College of the Liberal

October Talks By Naval Team Set for Coeds

The Navy Information Team with Lt. Barbara Deerkop will conduct interviews for junior or senior women interested in becoming Navy officers.

The interviews will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Oct. 4, 5 and 6 at the Hetzel Union building.

The team will also administer Officer Qualification Tests to interested persons. Taking the test will not obligate the person to the Navy.

Women officers hold executive positions in such fields as personnel administration, special services, educational fields, retail merchandising, finance, inventory control and purchasing.

The Medical Service Corps has openings for dietitians, physical therapy and occupational therapy workers.

Ridge to Speak in MI On Graduate Programs

Dr. John D. Ridge, assistant dean of the College of Mineral Industries, will speak on graduate programs in the college at 4:30 p.m. in the Mineral Industries auditorium.

The address will be followed by the election of a graduate representative for the college council.

Arts in cooperation with the Department of Theatre Arts, Department of Speech and the School of Journalism.

The new major is offered to students desiring professional training for the television and radio industries. Students completing the broadcasting requirements will graduate with a bachelor of arts degree.

The planning committee, headed by M. Eugene Goodwin, director of the School of Journalism, made a thorough study of broadcasting curricula in other universities and colleges and consulted many professional broadcasters before initiating the program. It was approved last spring by the University Senate.

The students enrolled in the major will take 32 to 38 semester hours of professional courses in communications and broadcasting in addition to the required courses in the College of the Liberal Arts.

These professional requirements include 16 semester hours for "core" courses for all majors. The student may elect courses in his field of specialization to fulfill the remaining required hours for his major in broadcasting.

"Core" courses include instruction in the principles of mass media, advertising, news and studio production.

Students may specialize in the fields of advertising and sales, news, public affairs, programming and production arts.

The University has spent $6000 on new equipment for the major and it is now being installed in various studios on the campus.

Council to Hold Parking Survey

The Engineering and Architecture Student Council formed a committee last night to study the on-campus parking problem.

It was suggested in discussion that this committee should stir up interest in the other college councils concerning the parking problem.

The council also suggested having students use the stadium parking facilities during the week, starting bus service from parking facilities built on the edge of campus and the opening of the Hetzel Union parking lot to students during the evenings and on weekends to alleviate the problem of lack of parking space.

The committee will hold an informal survey of parking lots during the evenings to determine the extent of their use.

In other business, council heard a report that some classrooms were so over-crowded that students were forced either to stand or sit on the window sills. Council member Jerome Gartman was appointed to discuss the problem with Dean Lawrence Perez.
