

Theologians Disagree On Voter Action

The role of the independent voter is important, but the form of his action was disagreed upon by Rev. Harvey G. Cox and Rev. Robert M. Herhold in the second discussion in the University Christian Association series — "Christianity in Politics."

Cox, visiting lecturer in Evangelism at Andover-Newton Theological Seminary, said the independent voter should stand outside the party to criticize it. On the other hand, Herhold, pastor of a Lutheran church near Minneapolis, Minn., said the independent voter should decide on a party and work within it to reform the party and nominate its candidates.

Both Cox and Herhold deplored the vote of the pre-decided voter. Cox said that race, religious denomination, economic class, family ties, geographical location, and special interest groups provide many voters with determinates before the campaign begins.

Dr. M. Nelson McGeary, professor of political science, emphasized this fact, noting that University of Michigan studies show that from 2/3 to 3/4 of the vote is decided before the candidates have expressed their views.

Sen. John Kennedy and Vice President Richard Nixon came under fire from both Cox and Herhold. Herhold said that both men play cards with the issues and neither man dealt precisely with them.

The final discussion, "Does Faith Affect the Office Holder?" will be held at 7:30 tonight in the Hetzel Union Assembly hall.

Student Receives Sparks Citation

Mary Ann Maiorca, senior in elementary and kindergarten education from Oakmont, was awarded the President Sparks Gold Medal Award last week.

The award is given to the student who makes a 4.0 average any given semester and whose average indicates the greatest gain of all students making a 4.0.

Of the 122 students to achieve a 4.0 last semester, Miss Maiorca's average showed the most improvement, jumping from a previous 1.17.

The medal was awarded by Dr. Howard A. Cutler, assistant to the vice president in charge of academic affairs.

JAZZ FESTIVAL: Frieda Lee and Don Krebs Quartet "swing out" as they participate in the jazz festival held Sunday in the Hetzel Union ballroom. Other musicians who played before a crowd, estimated at 250, were the Dave Atkinson Quartet, Robert Streeter, a graduate student and Robert Waterstradt, an alum.

Vold—Society Defines Criminal Behaviors

The decision of what should be called a crime depends not only on naming criminal behavior but also in society's definition of this behavior, Dr. George Vold, visiting professor of sociology, said yesterday.

Addressing the Faculty Luncheon Club on "National Characteristics of Criminality," Vold said that nations have different opinions of what behavior is considered crime.

For example, when the 18th Amendment became law, it legally proscribed as criminal selling liquor, which is considered uncriminal by many, he said. In Europe there is also a problem of alcoholic consumption but it is not considered a matter for the police but rather as one's own responsibility.

Within the United States when the Amendment by definition made such behavior a crime, three-fourths of those in prisons were violators of this crime, he added.

There was much finagling to get around this definition. He recalled an incident where liquor was openly served at a dinner. The host claimed he was not violating any crime and showed the keg which was labeled "Do not store in warm place or will have alcoholic fermentation contrary to law." By use of such a statement, the man was not violating the law, since the word "warm" was not defined.

Gambling is another type of behavior which is considered criminal by some nations and not by others, Vold said. A great portion of the world considers gambling a "good game," especially the Latin American countries. In the United States, however, gambling is often defined as a crime.

The definition of crime often rests on the outcome of politics, Vold said. Certain types of behavior in some countries are taken out of the hands of the lawmakers and become the concern of each individual, Vold said.

In Sweden and Denmark, this is true of sexual behavior. The Scandinavians believe sex is a personal matter and should not be defined as criminal or non-criminal by law, as is the case in the United States. Thus crime is not just behavior, but behavior defined as crime, Vold concluded.

LeSage Reviews Novel For National Magazine

Dr. Laurent LeSage, professor of Romance languages, is the author of a review of the book, "Zazie," in the current issue of the Saturday Review.

PANIC WHEN YOU TALK?

A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique of everyday conversation which can pay you real dividends in both social and business advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, self confidence and greater popularity.

According to this publisher many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by what they say and how they say it. Whether in business, at social functions, or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances, there are ways in which you can make a good impression every time you talk.

To acquaint the readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in everyday conversation, the publishers have printed full details of their interesting self-training method in a 24-page booklet, "Adventures in Conversation," which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. No obligation. Simply send your request to: Conversation Studies, 835 Diversey Parkway, Dept. 3757, Chicago 14, Ill. A postcard will do.

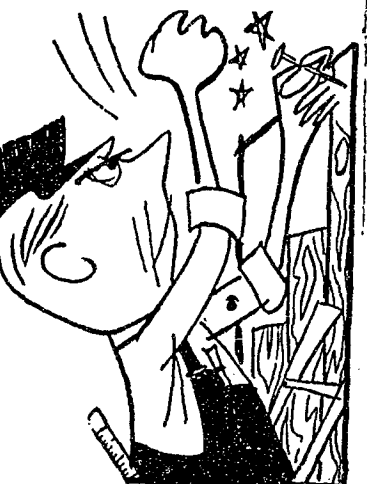

A Carpenter Without His Hammer—

— or a surgeon without his scalpel — is something like a student without his book. For books are the basic tools of the student's trade. Nothing has ever replaced the professor in the classroom, and nothing has ever replaced the main tool of teaching and learning—the book. You may forget, but your books won't. At 4:00 a.m. before your exams, your professors are getting their much needed rest. But your books are working with you—that is—if you have your own books.

Presumably you are in college because you want to learn. Your books are your tools. Don't be like the carpenter with a borrowed hammer who must finish his work at the convenience of the man who owns a hammer!

Penny for penny, page for page, books are the best

Space Information Sought by Bowhill

Dr. Sidney A. Bowhill, associate professor of electrical engineering, is seeking new information about wind motions and ionization irregularities.

Bowhill's research, which is being supported by a 3-year grant of $64,100 from the National Science Foundation, will deal chiefly with the E layer which is a region of the lower ionosphere about 55 miles above the earth.

Additional knowledge of turbulent motions in the upper atmosphere is important because of their effect on reception of radio signals from space stations or from the ground, according to Bowhill.
