

Ten Week Courses Begin in Summer

The life of the now extinct three and six-week summer school courses will be reincarnated this June into full ten week courses, when expansion of the summer session starts the four term program.

Courses previously offered for only part of the summer, will be taught for the entire term beginning this June. Robert G. Bernreuter, special assistant to the President for student affairs, said yesterday.

According to Bernreuter, this will not only expand the variety of courses, but will increase the flexibility of the summer term.

Bernreuter and Lawrence E. Dennis, vice president for academic affairs, have been designated by President Eric A. Walker to investigate how increased opportunities can be quickly developed for the upcoming summer term.

Bernreuter added that possibly all first term courses for freshmen will be offered in the summer as well as the fall term. This will enable a greater number of freshmen to be admitted, he said, since some professors are not able to teach in the fall, but are free in the summer.

Bernreuter also expressed the hope that students will take more initiative in providing extra-curricular activities during the summer session.

For the past two summers, the Artist Series has continued its program into the summer months. The Daily Collegian has expanded its production to include a Summer Collegian which was published twice weekly last summer.

In response to a question, Bernreuter said that one of the repercussions of the four term plan for increased activities was that ultimately sororities and fraternities would be able to occupy their residences full time, when full time enrollment is achieved for the entire academic year.

Students are to direct their requests to the Chief Clerk of the County Board of Elections in their home county. Each request must be personally signed. When the clerk receives the completed application, he will send the student an absentee ballot and instructions for its use.

Students who attend college in Pennsylvania but reside in other states can also vote by absentee ballot. Application deadlines for other states are as follows:

New York, Nov. 1; New Jersey, Oct. 31; Connecticut, anytime before election day; Delaware, Oct. 29; Maryland, Oct. 19; Massachusetts, anytime before election day; Ohio, election day; and Virginia, Nov. 1.

Students are reminded that there are only two weeks left in which they may obtain and return applications for absentee ballots from their home county election boards. The deadline for filing these applications in Pennsylvania is Nov. 1.

N.Y. to Administer Civil Service Test

These tests open the way to careers for students with a bachelor's degree. Such positions as statistician trainee, actuary trainee, bacteriologist trainee, library trainee, forester trainee and legal aide are available.

Applications and information may be obtained by writing to the Recruitment Unit, State Department of Civil Service, The State Campus, Albany 1, New York. Applications should be submitted by Nov. 7.

Ed College Plans For Transfers

A summary of uniform academic criteria for students transferring to the College of Education was adopted yesterday by the College's faculty.

The set of standards now used for admitting transfer students to the College was compiled by the Committee of Academic Affairs of the College chaired by Dr. Paul W. Campbell, associate professor of music education.

The standards for admitting transfer students were compiled so that the College would have a more uniform basis of admission, Campbell explained.

In other business a brief report on the common year for freshmen enrolled in education was presented by Dr. Abram W. VanderMeer, associate dean of the College of Education.

According to VanderMeer, education students had relatively little trouble at registration securing the subjects listed on their prepared schedules.

VanderMeer added that he thought the new program for the 710 freshmen enrolled in the College of Education was presenting relatively few problems and working rather well.

Pollson Housing List Shows Views Differ

By ELLIE HUMMER Should the off-campus housing list outside the dean of men's office be removed and substituted with a non-discriminatory listings? In response to student concern, this question was asked in an informal survey of about 20 students and administration members most involved with the problem.

The list, which is available to all students is maintained by the dean of men's office. No restrictions are imposed on the landlords who wish to advertise their housing facilities on this list.

Frank J. Simes, dean of men, said in an interview that the list is maintained as a service to all students. "At least hundreds, possibly thousands, refer to this listing during the spring and late fall," he added.

The listing, which was started by the predecessor to the University Christian Association, was taken over by the dean of men's office when too much emphasis was placed on religion, he said.

Until five years ago, Simes said, the landlords submitted to voluntary check and approval measures. However, this practice was stopped on the advice of legal council.

Usually the problems concerning housing are due to an overall shortage of rooms and not discriminations, he said.

However, although there may not be a problem with housing at the particular time, Jacob Dentu, senior in electrical engineering from Ghana said the issue is still present. In a shortage of housing, the problem would again be evident and show itself in the discrimination of colored and international students, he said.

"This is definitely an on-going issue. These students have never experienced this type of thing before," he added. Dentu said he feels discrimination distorts international students' view of American society and American principles.

Many students questioned felt that there is a definite problem in this area. Only one out of the twenty students questioned said the list should remain as it now is posted outside the dean of men's office.

The principle feeling among the group was that unless townspeople will take anyone on a first-come-first-served basis, they should not be allowed to advertise on a University list.

Only one or two cases were specifically cited where Negro or international students had difficulty in securing housing. However, in most instances these students go only to the places where they know they can get housing, in order to avoid the embarrassing situation of being turned down.
