

Prom Queen Applications Due by Sat.

Applicants for the Junior Prom Queen Contest must submit their pictures by noon Saturday to the Hetzel Union desk.

It is necessary that contestants include their name, semester standing and the name of the sponsoring group (if sponsored) on the back of the picture.

Any group may sponsor as many applicants as it desires and individuals may submit their own names. The only qualifications are that the applicant be a junior and that she be willing to attend the dance if she becomes a finalist, according to Patricia Dyer, queen committee chairman.

Five finalists will be selected from the pictures submitted by the Junior Prom Committee. Three judges will interview the finalists at 8:30 p.m. Oct. 27 in 217 Hetzel Union Building.

The name of the Queen will be announced at the dance Oct. 28 in Recreation Hall. She will receive a dozen long stemmed red roses and will be crowned with a tiara.

Health Issue Analyzed--

(Continued from page one) Kennedy's plan he would be compelled to subscribe to a set policy along with his other Social Security benefits for the designated period of time.

"Supplementary agencies now exist to take care of the medically needy and medically indigent," Davis said. A needy individual may receive aid from voluntary health organizations within his community, he said.

Davis explained that, at the present time, approximately 110 million people in the nation hold voluntary medical insurance policies while about 30 million are without medical coverage. Under the proposed Social Security health program, the question of how to handle these voluntary policies now in effect would pose a serious problem, he said.

Since the policy-holders represent a majority of the nation, Davis said, we must decide "whether or not the Social Security health plan should be imposed on this majority, when adequate agencies do exist to care for the minority."

In comparing foreign health programs with the American system now in operation, Davis said that "the experience of foreign plans has not kept pace with the American program." He said that "the quality of medicine would be affected if a government-controlled health program were instituted."

Davis said a satisfactory health program for the aged could be established under a federal grant-in-aid system. The state governments would receive funds from the federal government which would be used in solving their separate medical aid problems. Such a plan would incorporate the merits of both party platforms, he said.
