

Jr. Queen Interviews Scheduled

The five finalists chosen last night for the Junior Prom Queen Contest will be interviewed at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in 213 Hetzel Union Building.

They are Pamela Baker, junior in applied art from Media; Cynthia Hawkins, junior in elementary and kindergarten education from Pittsburgh; Dorrice Griffith, junior in secondary education from Ithaca, N.Y.; Barbara Vincent, junior in home economics from Lansdown, and Sandra Wilson, junior in home economics from Claremont, Calif.

The judges, William Coleman, local photographer; Mrs. Eric A. Walker, the University president's wife, and Laurence Latman, assistant professor of geomorphology, will choose the queen on the bases of poise, personality and appearance.

The queen will be announced at the Junior Prom on Friday night in Recreation Hall. Les Elgart and his band will play at the prom.

Tickets go on sale Friday at the HUB desk for $5 a couple. All students are invited to the dance.

Willard Gets Naval Grant

Dr. Mary L. Willard, professor of chemistry, has received a $20,000 grant from the Office of Naval Research to support a research project entitled "Optical-Crystallographic Properties of Explosive Salts."

Rackley--

(Continued from page one) aid to education." Examples of this kind of aid are financial support of agriculture and ROTC programs in state universities, he said.

Rackley said that the basic problem is "whether the variety of pressures exerted in the Senate and the House of Representatives will support a program of general aid to education." This, he said, would be the main test of either the Democratic or the Republican program.

A federal education program, Rackley said, "cannot be put into effect on a continuing local basis on the assumption that the states will get equal returns on their investments."

He explained that taxes received by the national government from the states represent the total spending of the people of a state. If the educational needs of a particular state are few, Rackley said, the state cannot expect to receive equal returns on its investment. The surplus tax money is instead allocated to those states whose educational needs are prominent.

If Congress voted in favor of a general aid program to education, "the states would not have to accept such a program but they would have to pay for it," Rackley said.

U.S. Prestige Surveys--

(Continued from page four) military production has been allotted for use in an emergency by other nations? This, too, is a definite part of the United States defense posture.

If there is doubt among the free world nations as to the U.S. defense posture, is there a factor in it involving doubt of their own intentions?

Tri-Delts--

(Continued from page one) evaluate our goals." The fraternity system, he said, offers benefits to both the university and to the student.

As individuals, each member of the system has ideals of his own, he said. Fraternity strength is each member, but the system must also develop a spirit of brotherhood.
