Kansas Psychologist Gives Grad Lecture

Differences between American and English children can be attributed to the fact that the Americans spend more time and are more deeply involved in sports, church groups, and the like, a University of Kansas psychology professor said last night.

Blood Donation Will Continue Today in HUB

Students may donate blood today from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Hetzel Union cardroom.

The Red Cross bloodmobile is on campus under the sponsorship of the State College Chapter of the Red Cross to make it convenient for students to donate blood.

Mrs. Raymond Marcon, chairman of the volunteer workers, said that 175 appointments have been made by students for donation both yesterday and today.

Persons over 21 do not need an appointment, however. Persons between the ages of 18 and 21 must have written parental consent.

Coffee, juice, milk and doughnuts are being served to the donors by the volunteer Red Cross workers and members of Gamma Sigma Sigma, the service sorority.

Mrs. Marcon said that the bloodmobile will be back on campus in April.

Lecture Series, termed the activities of sports, and church groups areas of behavior.

These behavior areas exist alike in America and England, and so the environments of English and American children are the same though the children differ.

Barker used as the basis for these statements, the results of study of two similar towns in England and America. Midwest, Kansas, and Yourdale, England, (pseudonyms given the towns) both had the same number of areas and similar structure and organization. But the children in Midwest spent more time in the activities than the English children of the same age did.

In England cricket, badminton and drama societies have a much higher percentage of adult participation. In America it is more often the children who are on basketball teams and put on plays, Barker said.

Barker also found that children in American are much more involved in these activities and have a higher sense of the responsibility placed upon them.

Russians Desire More Arms Talks

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Soviet Union expressed willingness yesterday to enter into negotiations with the new U.S. administration of John F. Kennedy in an effort to break the East-West disarmament deadlock.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin made the offer before the UN General Assembly's Political Committee, where he clashed with U.S. Delegate James J. Wadsworth — an appointee of the Eisenhower administration.

Random Poll Taken On Summer Term

A random telephone poll taken last week by the office of Robert Bernreuter, special assistant to the president for student affairs, revealed that only 7 per cent of the students questioned were certain that they would be here for the summer term, which will initiate the four-term system this June.

Ten per cent said they would probably be here, 2 per cent were completely uncertain as to their plans and 31 per cent said they probably would not be here.

The remaining 50 per cent queried said that they definitely would not be attending the summer term unless their plans changed radically before that time.

Another survey will be taken between the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, after students have the opportunity to discuss the new plan with their parents.

Bernreuter said yesterday that the first summer term will offer a richer variety of courses than any one of the previous "split" summer sessions. It will include, he continued, all the courses that were well received in past summer sessions.

Bernreuter added that courses required of freshmen will be offered so that qualified students will be able to go directly from high school to the University.

The deans of the various colleges, Bernreuter noted, will be asking outstanding professors in their colleges to instruct during the summer term.

Marceau Tickets Available in HUB; 1550 Still Remain

About 1550 student tickets are still available for the University Artists Series program by French pantomimist Marcel Marceau at 8 p.m. Sunday in Recreation Hall.

Tickets are being distributed at the Hetzel Union desk. Tickets for non-students and faculty will go on sale at 9 a.m. today.

Marceau, world famous French pantomimist, will present a program of sketches.

A new program has been scheduled for the tour, but Marceau, by special request, will include some old favorites, such as "Youth, Maturity, Old Age and Death" and "The Public Garden."

In "The Public Garden," Marceau peoples a park with all its familiar types. The characters include two gossiping old ladies, a priest reading as he strolls, a man with a dog on a leash, children at play, a balloon vendor, a pair of lovers and a statue on a pedestal.

Storm System to Chase Indian Summer Weather

The beautiful Indian Summer weather of the past few days will become just a memory today as a well-developed storm system becomes the main weather-maker for this area.

Showers and possibly thunderstorms will be frequent today and tonight with the rain occasionally heavy. Windy and mild weather will accompany the precipitation. Today's high will be close to 62 degrees and a low of 52 is indicated for tonight.

Cloudy, breezy and cooler weather is forecast for tomorrow with colder weather due tomorrow night.

Panhel Sets Change For Coffee Hours

The Panhellenic Council voted last night to make two changes in the rushing code for spring 1961 which had been accepted by the council at the last meeting.

After much discussion on the value of an extra coffee hour called for in the new rushing code, the council voted to change the rules to include two coffee hours as were held in previous rush periods.

Janet Carlisle, Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, suggested the council reconsider the rule setting up three coffee hours instead of the two coffee hours.

If a sorority holds three hours instead of two, Miss Carlisle said, it will be necessary to invite at least 60 women, making it very difficult for the sorority to get to know the rushees as well as it should.

In answer to a question concerning the possibility of a bad split in the number of women attending each coffee hour at each sorority, Mrs. Nancy Vanderpool, assistant to the dean of women, suggested a system in which the times for coffee hours would be closed after a certain number of women signed up for that time. This type of a system is used for all rush parties at Syracuse University, she said.

A motion to change the times for chatter dates in spring formal rush was passed with little discussion. The rush code was changed to read that the parties be held Feb. 20, 21, 23, 24. The change involved the elimination of Wednesday as a day for rushing and the substitution of Friday in its place.

Mr. Howard Wise, president of City Panhellenic, told the council that her group was working with the dean of women's staff on setting up a central information system, whereby information on all rushees would be available to those sororities needing it for its recommendation system.

Although it would not be possible to utilize the data processing system for this work for rush this year, she said, City Panhel is definitely working on this possibility for next year.

It will be possible, however, to have some sort of system to relate this information to the sororities for the coming formal rush, she said.

Northeastern U. Needs Parking Area

By PAT HALLER

(This is the second in a series of articles on traffic and parking problems which confront other colleges and universities.)

Parking problems at Northeastern University, Boston, are the result of insufficient off-street parking areas, according to an editorial in the student newspaper, the Northeastern News.

Northeastern University is located in the Back Bay section of Boston, and incorporated as a philanthropic institution in the General Laws of Massachusetts. It has an enrollment of about 6000.

Dormitory facilities for men and women are located near the campus, and a portion of the men students live in fraternities and rooming houses in the vicinity of campus.

The Northeastern News editorial said the blame for parking problems cannot be entirely placed on any one institution or organization. An analysis made by the paper stated that the fault lies in three areas.

First, it said, the city and state governments must take some responsibility. Massachusetts law forbids cars to park in public places for more than two hours.

Thomas J. Griffin, Boston Traffic Commissioner, said in an interview with the News that students and employees who break this law hurt the commerce of Boston and constitute a safety hazard to the city. He said he was "highly in favor" of an increase from a $1 to $15 fine for illegal parking.

However, according to the News editorial, Northeastern students feel they help rather than hinder Boston's commerce. The editorial says the students agree the laws should be enforced, but that there should be equality of enforcement between students and those who make and enforce the laws.

The editorial said that, secondly, the University is partly at fault. It blames the University for not taking an active role in encouraging students to form carpools and to use commercial buses.

The editorial placed the third source of blame on the selfishness of students for not adopting some of these same suggestions.
