What A Difference A Year Makes

By Sandy Padwa Collegian Sports Editor

Last year at this time the Liberty Bowl faced a very dark future, but at the last minute promoter Bud Dudley and his Philadelphia cronies came through with Penn State vs. Alabama and a flop was transformed into success.

Quite a man this Dudley. He's got an imagination longer than Broad St., the home of his bowl, and he has plenty of natural-born cunning to guide his wild ideas.

You can't miss him when he's around. He usually sports an ear-to-ear smile and a blue blazer with a gold Liberty Bell which appears to be as big as the real one.

Saturday, Dudley was in Pittsburgh scouting the Pitt-Penn State game. The night before he was in Miami watching Syracuse and the Hurricanes slug it out in the Orange Bowl.

Dudley wants Syracuse or Penn State for the host team in the second Liberty Bowl game which will be played in Philadelphia Stadium Dec. 17.

Chances are that he'll land one of the two teams with considerably less trouble than he had last year.

The same goes for the visiting team. "Last year everything was on an if and maybe basis," Dudley said, "but this year teams have been calling us."

It's not hard to figure the sudden change. Last year Penn State and Alabama took home nearly $98,000.

That's quite a sum considering that only 36,000 turned out in the cavernous stadium which seats 102,000.

A fat television contract makes Dudley's dream a financial goldmine and now that the Bowl is established it's a good bet that more people will turn out.

Dudley said that the visiting team berth could be filled by either Florida, Baylor, Rice, Texas, Alabama, or Oregon. Duke also was in the running until yesterday when North Carolina upset the Blue Devils, 7-6.

In addition, Dudley explained that the Atlantic Coast Conference has a ruling which says a team cannot accept a bowl bid until 6 p.m. on the eve of its final game.

It that's the cause Duke can forget about Philadelphia because the Blue Devils' last game is Dec. 3 with U.C.L.A.

Right now, Syracuse appears to be the logical choice because the Orange did beat State, 21-15, and bowl officials have a funny habit of looking at final records instead of interpreting intangibles.

Then the question remains. If Syracuse does get the bid will the Orange accept?

Syracuse is reported under consideration for three other bowls—the Gotham Bowl in New York, the Orange Bowl and the Cotton Bowl, where they are defending champions.

If Syracuse gets the opportunity to go South, it's a pretty good bet that they'll take a vacation in the sun.

Whether they do or do not remains to be seen, but if Bud Dudley is smart he won't play games and keep Penn State on the hook.

In Penn State he has a team that has improved greatly in the last four weeks.

The Lions are a good, strong football team and if it weren't for a few bad breaks earlier in the year, they might be one of the prime favorites for a southern trip.

Dudley should also keep in mind that State is the only team to beat Pitt and Army. On the other hand, both Pitt and Army beat Syracuse.

Penn State helped Bud Dudley when things didn't look bright for him. The time has come to return the favor because the 1960 Penn State football team deserves the chance to defend its Liberty Bowl title.

Huskies Get Bowl Bid

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — University of Washington was picked yesterday for a second straight appearance at Pasadena's Rose Bowl football classic next Jan. 2. Speculation arose immediately that Navy, the only team to beat Washington this season, might be chosen as the opponent.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bears combined long passing strikes and a brutal rush against Detroit's passing yesterday to trounce the Lions 28-7 in a National Football League game which ended in a wild, fist-swinging melee.

Cagers Face Tough Schedule; Pin Hopes on DuMars, Harris

By SANDY PADWE Basketball coach John Egli and his All-American candidate Mark "The Magician" DuMars will have to come up with some real sorcery if Penn State hopes to get through the 1960-61 basketball season with a winning log.

Taking all factors into consideration, Egli's Lions face one of the toughest, if not the toughest schedule in the nation with 16 games on the road and only eight at home.

The Lions will face such powers as Maryland (the opener Dec. 1), Duke, Wake Forest, West Virginia, Army, Navy, Syracuse (twice) and Pitt on the road.

At the Evansville tournament, State will be matched with either Evansville College, the nation's small college champ, Denver or Los Angeles State.

Then there are other away games with the old standbys — Lehigh, Bucknell, Gettysburg, Colgate and Carnegie Tech — and these teams are extremely tough on their home courts.

The sparse home schedule will be a good one. Purdue, with All-American and Olympian Terry Dischinger, will be here Dec. 3.

Colgate, Carnegie Tech, Bucknell, Pitt, West Virginia, Temple and Rutgers round out the slate. Right now Egli isn't worrying about anything except the opener with Maryland and he has plenty to worry about because the Terrapins are given a good chance to finish high in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings.

Egli will be looking for DuMars and leaping Gene Harris to carry most of the offensive load this season.

DuMars, who can do anything with a basketball, has been Penn State's leading scorer for the last two years.

In 1958-59, the Lion captain finished with a 16.8 average and last year he poured 468 points through in 22 games for a 21.3 average as the Lions broke even 11-11.

Only 5-10, DuMars is a definite threat for All-American guard honors along with Providence showman Johnny Egan, Utah State's Max Perry and Dick Hickox of Miami (Fla.).

DuMars is a bundle of trouble from any spot on the court.

He's a tricky driver and scores half of his points by sailing through enemy defenses.

His best weapon, though, is a feathery jump shot from 20 to 25 feet out and he can hit from any angle with it.

Harris, a lean 6-3 jumper, was Penn State's top rebounder last year (220) as a sophomore. He showed signs of being an offensive standout too, despite his low average of 9.9.

He has improved greatly since last winter and Egli thinks Jumping Gene can turn into an excellent big man.

Front court help for Harris will come from veterans Jake Trueblood (6-5) and John Phillips (6-3).

Trueblood is a strong rebounder and pulled in 157 stray balls last season. Offensively he averaged 7.6.

Phillips could mean the difference for the Lions this year.

As a sophomore, he made 48 per cent of his shots, but his trouble was that he didn't shoot enough.

His 3.9 average doesn't indicate his offensive ability and if he starts to shoot a little more, Penn State may surprise a few teams.

Fiery Don Wilson, a senior backcourtman with enough hustle for a whole team, rounds out the top five. Wilson missed most of the 1959 season with a broken arm.

Backing up the first five are sophomore stars Earl Hoffman and John Mitchell.

Varsity holdovers include Fred Eisele and Dick Dibert.

Footballers Bill Saul and Dave Robinson also will give much needed help up front.

Pitt Win Makes Up For Everything—Rip

It took Rip Engle quite a while to break away from the handshakers in the Penn State dressing room Saturday after his Lions whipped Pitt, 14-3.

But when he did, the Ripper sat back and reflected on the 1960 football season.

"I'm real happy. You can't ask the kids to do more than they did today.

"In many ways this is one of the finest bunch of boys I've ever worked with. What I mean is that morally, emotionally and spiritually they are tops.

"They really played up to their potential today and this win makes up for everything.

"We had some real tough breaks earlier," Engle said thinking back to the Syracuse (21-15) and Illinois (10-8) losses.

State finished the season with a 6-3 record but it might have been 8-1 if the clock hadn't run out at Syracuse with the Lions on the Orange four.

At Illinois a windswept field goal was the margin of victory.

State's other loss was to previously top-ranked Missouri, 21-8.

Engle had plenty of praise for his whole team but he singled out Jim Kerr as the man who made the difference Saturday.

"Kerr was nervous at first," Engle said referring to his fumble on the kickoff which set up the Pitt field goal, "but then he took charge and took off. He turned from a mediocre player to a great one today."
