

LA, Ed, MI Councils Discuss Major Plans

The Liberal Arts, Education and Mineral Industries Student Councils each met last night to discuss major council projects.

A committee consisting of representatives of the College of Education faculty, Linda Huston, secretary-treasurer of the education council, and two freshmen representatives from the council will evaluate the education services 10 course the council decided last

Health Physics Fellowships Now Available

Fellowship applications with an annual stipend of $2500 are available to seniors and graduate students in engineering and science curriculums who will specialize in health physics.

The fellowships are offered by the Atomic Energy Commission Special Fellowships in Health Physics and are administered by the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

The fellowship includes the payment of tuition, required fees and a limited travel allowance besides the annual stipend and an additional $350 for a spouse and $350 for each dependent child.

Health physics is devoted to the study, evaluation and control of radiation hazards, a field of study that did not even exist until the late 1940's.

Appointees must spend the next academic year at one of eight universities offering this course of study followed by three months at an AEC laboratory.

Deadline for filing applications is Feb. 1, 1961.

AWS Senate to Meet

The Association of Women Students will hold a full Senate meeting at 6:30 tonight in 203 Hetzel Union Building.

Final plans will be presented for the Freshmen Tea to be held Sunday, Dec. 11, in Pollock I.

Reports will be heard from Food and Housing Chairman Linda Houston and Reorganization Chairman Lil Davenport.

Trudy Cader, freshman in education from Scranton, and Ann Farnsworth, freshman in education from DeWitt, N.Y., will represent the members on the council.

Education Services 10 is a non-credit course which allows no cuts and which is required of all freshmen in the College of Education. Suggestions had been made at previous meetings that action be taken concerning the course.

Career day, the advising system and the big sister program were also discussed by the members.

The Mineral Industries Student Council decided last night to conduct balloting on an academic honesty program in mineral industry curriculum.

Eugene Grumer, president of the council, said the College of Mineral Industries has an official academic honesty program which can be put into effect in the various curriculums by an 85 per cent vote of the juniors and seniors of the curriculum.

An academic honesty program officially exists in only two curriculums, geophysics-geochemistry and mineral preparation.

The Liberal Arts Student Council announced last night that the first in a series of lectures, sponsored by the council, will be held at 7:30 Tuesday in the Hetzel Union Building assembly room.

Dr. Henry Finch, professor of philosophy, will speak on "Plain Morals for Dizzy Moderns; Aesop and His Fables."

Diane Lipner, chairman of the lectures, said that refreshments will be served after the meeting. The lecture is free of charge.

It was also announced that a representative from the social security office in State College will speak about summer jobs for juniors and government jobs for seniors at 7 p.m., Dec. 12 in 303 Willard. Plans will be discussed in detail at a later meeting.

Women's Chorus To Give Concert In Phillipsburg

The Penn State Women's Chorus will present its first full concert at 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 7 in the Phillipsburg High School.

The special rehearsal schedule for these final days before the concert is as follows: 3:45 to 9:30 tonight in the Hetzel Union assembly room; 2 to 4:30 p.m. Dec. 3 in 117 Carnegie; 7 to 9 p.m. Dec. 5 in the HUB Ballroom for the final rehearsal.

Buses will leave for Phillipsburg at 6:15 p.m. and 7 p.m. from the HUB.

Among the selections which the chorus will sing are "Oklahoma" by Rodgers and Hammerstein, three folk songs by Brahms, "Night Song" and "If Winter Comes" which will be done by a soloist.

They will also sing a special arrangement of Penn State songs by Elmer C. Wareham, instructor of music, which consist of "The Blue and White" and the "Penn State Alma Mater."

The second half of the concert will deal with Christmas songs, such as "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach, "The Birthday of a King" and "Glory to God in the Highest."

The Women's Chorus meets as an academic class each Wednesday evening. They will present a mid-winter concert with the Men's Glee Club and also the annual Spring Concert on April 23.

SGA to Sponsor Xmas Carol Sing

The Christmas season will open officially on campus next Tuesday night with the Carol Sing sponsored by the Student Christian Association, the University Chapel and the Newman Club.

Caravans of carolers, led by members of the Chapel and Meditation Choirs, will gather at their residence halls at 8:30 p.m. and move toward the Helen Eakin Eisenhower Chapel for a Christmas program and tree-lighting ceremony.

Miss Genevieve M. Dilts, associate director of the UCA, said that this is the first year caravans will be organized. She said students will be expected to join the caravans when choir members begin singing in their respective residence hall areas.

Five areas have been tentatively scheduled for the singing, she said. They are North Halls, South Halls, West Halls, Pollock Circle, and McElwain, Simmons and Atherton Halls.

The Chapel program will begin about 9 p.m., or after all the caravans have met at the Chapel. Preceding the program will be an organ recital at 8:40 p.m. and a brass ensemble at 8:55 p.m.

Miss Dilts said the program will be divided into three parts, the Preparation, the Announcement, and the Adoration. She said three students will be selected to give introductory readings before the singing of each carol during the program.

Special choral music will be sung by one of the Meditation Choirs, directed by the Rev. Richard Hovanec and by the Chapel Choir, directed by Mrs. Willa Taylor.

James Beach assistant director of the Meditation Choir, will lead one of the choirs and also direct the student singing.

Following the Carol Sing, Dr. Luther H. Harshbarger, University chaplain, and Albert E Diem, vice president for business administration, will begin the tree-lighting ceremony in the Chapel courtyard.

Miss Dilts said that all students and townspeople are invited to attend the ceremony and join the caravans. She said that all persons should bring flashlights for the caroling.

Penn State's first publication was "The Anonymous," a handwritten weekly.

Eng Council Will Award Scholarships

Applications for the two Engineering and Architecture Student Council scholarships are now available in the Scholarship Office in Old Main or at the dean's office at 204 Sackett.

The deadline for filling-out applications is 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 9. They should be returned to 204 Sackett.

These scholarships are awarded annually to two outstanding sophomores of the college. Scholarship, financial need, extra-curricular activities and character are the criteria used in selecting the recipients.

These awards are intended to help outstanding students by paying their fourth semester tuition, according to Charles Gaston, president of the Council. However, Gaston said, last year there were less than 15 applicants for the two scholarships.

Concert Tickets Still Available

About 400 student tickets are still available for the concert to be presented by the Societa Corelli at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in Schwab.

Nearly 100 faculty and non-student tickets still remain. Tickets may be obtained at the Hetzel Union desk.

The Societa Corelli, an ensemble of 13 instrumentalists, will present the program here as part of a concert tour of the United States and Canada.

The Societa, named for the 17th century Italian violinist and composer, Arcangelo Corelli, is directed by Silvano Zuccarini.

Zuccarini is also cello soloist for the group. His sister, Mirilla, appears as a piano soloist.

Christmas Cheer Collection Gather Gifts for Hospitalized

The Christmas Cheer Collection, a campus-wide project sponsored by the Sociology Club, will collect Christmas gift items for patients of Hollidaysburg and Danville State Hospitals.

The drive, which will be conducted next Monday until Friday has as its theme the C.C.C. tree, a small paper tree which will be worn by those participating in the project.

Letters have been sent to all campus residents and fraternities explaining the purpose of the drive and the articles needed.

Boxes for depositing clothing and other articles will be placed in each sorority suite fraternity house, and residence hall for the collection period. Boxes for financial contributions will be placed in the Hetzel Union Building and the Warnock, Pollock and Waring dining halls.

Both sororities and fraternities have volunteered to help with the distribution and collection of the boxes.

Suggested items for the collection are books, clothing, toilet articles, jewelry, plastic tumblers, hobby materials, smoking supplies, decorative items and food.

Students are requested to wrap the gifts without enclosing their names. Some identification should be made of items of clothing.

Groups not receiving boxes and students interested in providing transportation of the boxes should call UN 5-5367.

Harris to Speak Today

Dr. Dale B. Harris, professor of psychology, will speak on "A Quality Scale for Estimating Psychological Maturity from the Drawing of a Man" at the Psychology Colloquium today.

The colloquium will be held at noon in dining room A of the Hetzel Union Building.
