

Candidates Review University Plank

A University party proposal advocating coordination of student governing groups under the Student Government Association faced mixed reactions in interviews with candidates for assembly seats last night.

The plan, advanced in the University party's election platform, would provide for coordination of such groups as Leonides, Town Independent Men, campus men's organizations and community councils.

Pat Higgins, junior in home economics from Sterling, Va., and a University candidate for assembly, said the plan would make student government stronger. She added that while the plan might take a while to work out, it would give unity and continuity to student affairs.

Wayne Ulsh, junior in business administration from Plainfield, said, "SGA is not working up to its constitutional limitations now." He added that SGA should do more under its present system rather than try to expand.

The 42 people now on SGA Assembly would be given too much to do under the University party plan, he said. They should, instead, work up to and increase the scope of their present system, he said.

Ulsh is running for junior assemblyman as an independent candidate and has been endorsed by members of the proposed Liberal party.

Campus candidate Edward Loev, sophomore in pre-med from Philadelphia, said student groups might lose their authority if they were all consolidated under SGA. He feels students need more authority, which they could not gain under the University party plan.

Loev is a candidate for sophomore assemblyman.

The SGA elections will be held next Tuesday, and Wednesday, Dec. 6 and 7.

Eidophor to Carry Wrestling Matches

The Penn State - Army wrestling meet will be shown on the Eidophor screen at 7 p.m. Saturday in Schwab as part of a closed circuit television experiment. The doors of Schwab will open at 6:45 p.m.

Two cameras will be used in the experiment, Leslie P. Greenhill, associate director of the Division of Academic Research and Services, said.

If the first attempt is successful the procedure will be adopted for overflow crowds in the future. There will be no charge for the experimental showing.

Giles Believes Majors Can Reach Agreement

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Warren Giles, president of the National League, said yesterday he believed the two feuding major leagues could come up with a territorial agreement as the result of today's summit conference with Commissioner Ford Frick.

"I have enough faith in the fairness of the National League and American League owners," said Giles, "to make me believe we can come up with a rule that will not deprive large cities of two major league clubs where it appears justified."

Eng, Arch Scholarships Still Open

Only one application has been received for the two Engineering and Architecture Student Council scholarships, Charles Gaston, president of the council, said at last night's meeting.

Sophomores enrolled in the college are eligible for these scholarships. Applications may be obtained in the Scholarship Office in Old Main or at the dean's office at 204 Sackett.

The deadline for filing applications is 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 9 in 204 Sackett. The scholarships will pay the students' tuition for their fourth semester.

In other business, the council decided to appoint a standing committee to compile a book list for engineering courses. This list would be made available to students while they are at home between quarters, Richard Westrick, sponsor of the bill, said. Students may then be able to buy books at home and perhaps save money, he added.

An amendment to fill vacant council seats passed the first vote of the council. Under this amendment, vacancies will be filled after elections by applications. The elections committee of the council will then refer qualified applications to the council where they will be accepted or rejected by a majority vote.

Phila. School Offers Grant

An annual full tuition scholarship to the Pennsylvania State College of Optometry in Philadelphia is being offered for a woman resident of Pennsylvania.

To qualify for the four-year award, a student must have two years of pre-optometric college work. Students must also rank in the upper half of their classes during their last year of college. All scholarship winners must remain in the upper half of their classes during the term of their graduate studies at the Pennsylvania State College of Optometry.

The scholarship is valued at $3200. Women interested should write to Woman's Auxiliary of the Pennsylvania Optometric Association, Executive Offices, PO Box 1201, Harrisburg.

AWS Allots Working Funds For Area Council Activities

The Association of Women Students decided last night to allot 10 cents per woman living in each area to the respective community council.

This sum will serve as a working fund for council sponsored activities.

AWS Senate will provide Christmas trees for individual residence units. All units that want Christmas trees are to contact Linda Huston, food and housing chairman, this week. Trees will be secured through the Building and Grounds Department.

This decision came as a result of Housing's policy which provides Christmas trees only for one central location in each area.

In other business, AWS Senate voted to look into the possibility of sponsoring a contest to find the best-dressed coed at the University.

This contest is held annually by Glamour magazine. All entrants must be sponsored by a recognized campus organization. Each college wishing to enter a woman must hold its own contest and enter its winner by the deadline, March 1, 1961.

It was also moved that Linda Huston, food and housing chair-
