

Deadline Set For BusAd $100 Award

The deadline for applications for the Business Administration Council award of $100 was extended to Wednesday, Jan. 4 recently at a meeting of the council.

A motion was made by John Bonella, senior in business administration from Philadelphia, to drop the requirement of a 3.0 All-University average, but after discussion council members decided to keep the original requirements.

As originally stated by the council, applicants will be considered on the basis of service to the College of Business Administration and the University, character and at least a 3.0 All-U. They must also be enrolled in the College of Business Administration and must be of junior or senior standing.

A letter will be sent to all eligible students this week. These must be returned to the council by the deadline date.

Larry Abrams, president of the council, reported that further investigations of the "K" rules and their effect on the students and faculty will be conducted. Findings will be revealed at the next council meeting.
