Dear Santa Claws,

I am a little mouse. I am a student at Penn State, and all of my classes are in Pine Cottage. Sometimes I get tired of having all my classes in the same building, but what can I do? I happen to be a W type mouse, so this semester I registered the last day. Naturally, I got the picked through left-overs—Pine Cottage classes. But here is the good part. Next semester I will register the first day, and I am sure to get Boucke classes.

I have really tried to be a good mouse. I have eaten all of the food that the experiments require, even though sometimes it is not cooked too well or the meal is too starchy. Maybe they are trying to put some weight on me. I have cooperated in all of my experiments and passed all of my tests. I have even cut down my social life in order to raise the all-mice average.

More than anything in the world I would like a parking lot for Christmas. My cage is not too big, and I am sure you can find a parking lot that will be just right for me. Also, I would like my parking lot to be portable so I can park close to Pine Cottage. As it is now, I have to walk so far from where I park my cage, that I am becoming a skinny type mouse. In addition, it makes me late for my experiments. If I keep getting thinner, I am going to mess up all of my experiments, and this might disrupt the whole field of psychology. So please won't you give me a portable parking lot for Christmas?

I know that I am just a little insignificant mouse, but I hope you will pay special attention to my letter and try hard to find a place for me to park my cage.

Urgently,
Weeny
