

Lion Five Tops Tech, 72-67

Cagers Will Seek 7th Against Bisons

By SANDY PADWE

It's lucky for Penn State that Gene Harris saves his best shooting nights for Mark DuMars' worst.

For the third time this year, Harris came to Penn State's rescue with a superb offensive performance as the Lions barely edged Carnegie Tech, 72-67, in Rec Hall Saturday.

Harris' 24-point splurge was no surprise to Lion coach John Egli who saw the junior jumper come through with 19 at Lehigh last month and 20 against Colgate Thursday.

DuMars, on the other hand, scored only 21 points in those two games. He had 14 Saturday but was 3 for 15 from the field.

Egli's only hope is that Harris and DuMars, State's All-American guard candidate, can get together more often.

Tonight would be fine for a starter because the Lions face a tough Bucknell team (6-3) in Lewisburg, Pa., at 8.

Saturday's win over Tech moved State's record to 6-4, far above what had been predicted for this date.

"We're not a one-man team anymore, that's why we're doing better this year," Egli said.

"These teams are pulling extraordinary defenses on Mark so they can stop him, but these other boys are capable of doing the job.

"Harris proved that at Lehigh and against Colgate and he did it again against Tech. Look at Jake Trueblood. He had 18 Saturday and John Mitchell had 24 against Colgate.

"As for Mark, he's even better than before. He's still scoring (18.5) and his passing is great.

"Saturday he fed Harris with some beautiful passes. I know I wouldn't have caught them if he had warned me they were coming.

"You just never know when he's going to pass you that ball," Egli concluded.

It was DuMars' pin-point passing to Harris under the bucket that kept State in Saturday's game with the fired-up Tartans.

Mel Cratsley's crew held the lead for most of the first half and at one point they led, 21-13.

Then Harris and DuMars went to work and State began pecking away at the Tech lead.

With Tech leading near the end of the half, 31-29, DuMars dribbled toward the basket, turned away suddenly, and fired a behind-the-back pass to Harris who stuffed it through to tie the score.

A pair of fouls by Trueblood put the Lions two up, but Fred Williams' free throw knocked the lead to 33-32, at intermission.

On the first scoring play of the second half, DuMars combined with Harris on a fast break. Mike Flynn hit a jumper for Tech but then DuMars connected with Harris again for the Lions.

The Lions held on to their slim lead the rest of the way, but the hustling Tartans made it tough.

State didn't win the game until the last 20 seconds when DuMars and Jake Trueblood sank four straight fouls to clinch the win, 72-67.

The expected duel between DuMars and Tech's Bill Soffa never really got started.

Soffa managed to tie DuMars in scoring with 14 but DuMars' superiority was evident when it came to play-making.

Andy Komer and Flynn were high for Tech (3-7) with 19 points apiece.

Tonight's foe, Bucknell, has pulled its share of surprises this year.

The Bisons walloped Colgate last week, 104-82, just one night before State was forced to rally for a 78-68 win.

Saturday, Dick Kniffen and Joe Steiner led the Bisons to a 75-69 win over Delaware.

Freshman Cagers Debut at Bucknell

Wally Colender, Penn State's 1959-60 basketball captain, makes his coaching debut tonight when the freshman basketball team meets Bucknell at Lewisburg.

The game will also mark the debut of 6-6 Wayne Lundy, who many consider to be Penn State's next basketball super star.

Lundy, one of the most sought after high school stars in the nation last year, hails from Detroit, Mich. He played his high school basketball in Cincinnati, O., where he made every possible high school all-star team.

Besides Lundy, the rest of the starting lineup will be composed of Hulo Kart at center, Charley Marin at forward and Bob D-Nato and Dick Dunn will be the guards.

NCAA Lifts Ban on Sooners

By JIM KENSIL
Associated Press Sports Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — The

University of Oklahoma last night was restored to the good graces of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Sooners can again compete in bowl games and NCAA-controlled football telecasts.

There was no announcement in the cases of North Carolina and Arizona.

Oklahoma was the third school removed from probation yesterday. Earlier, Tulsa and Southern California also were restored to full rights and privileges of the NCAA.

The NCAA council, which lifted the year-old, indefinite probation from Oklahoma, held another brief meeting last night and will hold an early session today before disposing of the investigation into basketball recruiting at North Carolina and football recruiting at Arizona.

In the case of Oklahoma, the powerful 18-man council said it had received access to the books of a football recruiting fund available to the Sooners in the period 1952-54. The council said the records show no athletes currently participating in Oklahoma sports are in any way involved with that recruiting fund.

Therefore, the decision was to lift the Oklahoma ban immediately. It had been in effect since January 6, 1960.

Remaining on NCAA probation are Kansas until Oct. 26, 1962, Montana State College, Oct. 27, 1961, Arizona State University Oct. 27, 1961, Indiana University

April 27, 1964, and Auburn, April 21, 1961.

Auburn's probation originally was not due to be terminated until Sept. 1, 1961, but the council yesterday moved the date up five months to April in order to make the university's spring sports teams eligible for post-season championships this year.

Walt Byers, executive director of the NCAA, said Oklahoma had cooperated throughout the investigation and as much as possible during their year of probation.

He also said the NCAA had finally managed to secure the necessary information on the recruiting fund from Arthur Wood, former Oklahoma City accountant now living in Reno, Nev.

Last year, at the time of the action against Oklahoma, Wood had refused to permit the NCAA or the university to examine the books of the recruiting fund.

Wood said then a federal law prohibited him from divulging personal income tax information. He also said it would be unethical for him to disclose books which concerned other matters, including investments in addition to the recruiting fund.
