

Pocahontas's Origin Traced to Greece

By SUE TAYLOR

The basis for the story of Pocahontas and John Smith can be traced back thousands of years to Greek mythology, Dr. Philip Young, professor of literature, said last night.

In Medieval literature, however, this type of story was called "The Enamored Muslin Princess," Young told those who attended the second of the Liberal Arts Lecture Series.

The beautiful princess always rescues her father's prisoner, converts to his religion, and accompanies him back to his native land, Young explained.

Opinions differ as to the truth of the Pocahontas story as we know it today, Young said. Those who doubt it say that John Smith had a tendency for stories of this sort. Smith supposedly said that he was also rescued from death by a beautiful woman in Constantinople, Young added.

Also, they say, Smith did not refer to Pocahontas in his first two versions of his Jamestown experiences. It was not until 1622, 16 years after the adventure, that he mentioned her.

Those who defend the truth of the legend, Young said, say that the Pocahontas episode was cut out of Smith's first book by the editor.

Also, Smith could not have

Group Hears Housing Query

The proposed questionnaire for the Chamber of Commerce off-campus housing survey was presented at a meeting of the town Burgess' Committee last night for evaluation and discussion.

The questionnaire is being prepared by Dr. William G. Mather, head of the Department of Sociology.

Paul Mazza, president of the Chamber of Commerce, declined to comment on the questionnaire after last night's meeting.

The Burgess' Committee is an unofficial group whose members include a representative of the Centre Daily Times, Dr. Mather and student representatives from DARE (the Direct Action for Racial Equality), Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity and the SGA Committee on Inter-racial Problems.

described the ceremony of a white man's adoption into the tribe so well unless he had actually participated, they say.

"Truly extraordinary is the way that this story pervades our culture."

"The story might express a wish among people for trans-racial love," he said.

Bush to Join Magazine Correction

George S. Bush has resigned as associate professor of journalism, effective January 31, to accept a position as Eastern Special Features Editor for Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

He joined the Penn State faculty a year ago after serving on the faculty of the School of Journalism at the University of Minnesota.

It was inadvertently omitted from the article that appeared in yesterday's Collegian dealing with Arctic employment that the jobs were of a temporary nature, available for the summer only. A representative from the Weather Bureau will be on the campus in the near future to interview interested students.

Again in 1961 The Student Government Association offers this Thrift Flight to Europe as a service to the student body, faculty and staff of the University. The aircraft used will be provided by a regular scheduled trans-Atlantic carrier and will be the finest and fastest type of piston equipment.

The Thrift Flight provided by SGA during Summer 1960 enabled 76 qualified Penn Staters to enjoy Europe at very substantial economies. Unquestionably many more will wish to take advantage of the 1961 flights and tour. The number of inquiries already received indicate the substantial demand that exists.
