

Dim Outlook Seen For Campus Party

Pessimism shrouded the future of Campus party this week as campus political leaders expressed doubt as to the course of action the party must take to remain a factor in University politics.

When asked his opinion on the newly-chartered Liberal party, Michael Lazorchak, chairman of University party, said that he was glad that Liberal party had been granted a charter because it looked to him as if Campus party was weakening and another political party was necessary to maintain the present two-party system.

Winter Concert Will Feature Four Soloists

Four special soloists will be featured when the University Symphony Orchestra presents its annual Winter Concert at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in Schwab.

Thomas Clatch, junior in music education from Hazleton, will be the pianist for the "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra" by Khachaturian.

Clatch has studied with Alice Coyle, who was a student of Anton Rubenstein, and with Lucy Monahan at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, Mass.

Kay Esslinger, senior in music education from Reading, will sing five songs of the Auvergnein, in the native Languedoc dialect which was spoken in an old section of France. These folk songs will include two lullabies, two humorous songs and two pastoral songs.

The flute solo in the "Concerto for Flute and Harp" by Mozart will be given by Marian Barry, member of the Department of Music summer faculty.

Ruth Papalia, a resident of Warren, will play the harp solo in the "Concerto for Flute and Harp."

Rush Registration Set

The date for sorority Formal Spring Rush registration has been set for Monday, February 6 from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. in 212 Hetzel Union.

Richard Snyder, chairman of Liberal party, agreed with Lazorchak when he stated that he felt that Liberal and University would be the only parties competing in the spring elections.

Lazorchak also stated that in his opinion the absorption of Campus party by the other two parties was already in progress.

Campus party chairman Dennis Eisman said that it remained to be seen if the party participates in the elections this spring. At the same time he said reports stating that Campus party is effectively weakened are unfounded.

"Kind of dead, Campus party is," Richard King, Campus party's minority leader in the Student Government Association Assembly, said when informed of the opinions of Lazorchak and Snyder.

King reported that a reorganizational meeting of the party, now the oldest on campus, that was originally scheduled for last week will be held at the beginning of next semester. The purpose of the meeting will be to talk over the position of the party, King added.

At the present time Campus party has 13 members in the 42-man Assembly and also one member on the 3-man executive board, Susan Sherman, SGA secretary-treasurer.

Seven of these positions must be refilled at the spring elections, King said.

West Hall Women's Council To Penalize Coeds for Noise

The West Halls Women's Area Council decided Thursday to discipline girls who are caught making a disturbance in the area residence halls.

The girls breaking the new regulation will either be "expelled" from the residence hall until 11:30 p.m. or will lose a one o'clock on a Friday night.

Individual penalties, according to the new ruling, will be left to the discretion of the senior resident in the residence hall.

The council patterned its ruling after one made earlier this week by the Atherton Council. One difference, however, is that the West Halls girls who lose a one o'clock on a Friday night will have to report every hour to the senior resident in the residence hall.

This stipulation was included to prevent the girls from "sneaking out" on the night that are being punished, council members felt.

At the meeting the West Halls Men's Area Council informed the women's council that women are permitted in the TV and study lounges in Hamilton and Thompson Halls. This had been the existing policy but the men's council felt that some girls were not aware of this fact.

THE OLD AND THE NEW: What may be a sign of things to come is on display at the west side of Old Main. The modern light (right) is a manufacturer's sample; one of its features is that it gives more light. At left, is one of the traditional type which are all over campus.

What Will It Be?

Seniors will be given a chance to vote on their class gift during registration, Tim Nelligan, chairman of the gift committee, said last night.

The committee eliminated all but three suggestions. They are: benches and bicycle racks, a dock and boat landing for the Stone Valley Lake and information booths, Nelligan said. "We want a gift which can be completely financed by the $5000 we now have," he added.

Most of the benches on campus are around Old Main. Senior President Herman Weber said. We could buy about 100 benches which would be distributed all over campus, he added. If the dock and boat landing is chosen as the senior gift, the plans will be drawn by the architecture department. The information booths, as described by Robert E. Beam, director of the University's Alumni Fund, would aid visitors to the campus. Each booth would have a 10 by 6 ft. map of the campus plus a dispenser for individual maps. One would be located on west campus near the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. The other would be located on east campus. Other ideas submitted to the committee included an entire new faculty and IBM machine smashers. "Whatever gift is chosen, we hope to have our goal completed before graduation," Nelligan said.

Beatrice Wins Male Acclaim In Fraternities

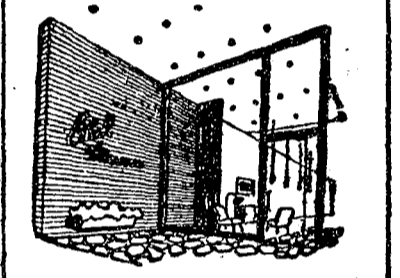

The well publicized coed author of "Things I Have Learned From Boys I Have Dated" in this month's Seventeen magazine has had "a few interesting things" happen to her since her views on the campus social scene were published in The Daily Collegian last week.

Beatrice Wein, freshman in journalism from Broomall who thinks "fraternity men are boring," has received 16 phone calls from interested or belligerent young men, made an appearance on WMAJ radio and accepted an invitation from the editor of Froth to write an article for the "Down With Greeks" issue.

Miss Wein said that some of the phone calls came from fraternities where she spoke to three or four "boys." One of the fraternity calls was quite obnoxious, Beatrice said. It seems that a group of Greeks asked her some "extremely personal" questions.

Miss Wein said that she answered the questions "in a joking way." She was later informed that the whole "interview" had been tape recorded.

Beatrice said that she accepted three blind dates over the phone, one of which was with a fraternity man.

Through the Looking Glass with Gabbi

As I predicted last week, the outcome for the end of the semester is gloomy. That is unless the long faces I've seen about campus this week are a new fad. When you're down in the dumps, why not stop in at Ethel Meserve's. Just look around. Perhaps our contemporary cards can cheer you up.

WORRIED ABOUT THAT LANGUAGE FINAL? At Ethel Meserve's store you can find a handy foreign language dictionary. Pocket size too, for instant use. Be prepared for your final and get one today.

GIRLS, DO YOU FEEL LIKE A SLAVE... to those books? Well if you don't you should, remember those finals next week. Show the world that you slave for good marks and wear those special silver slave bracelets from Ethel Meserve's. Seriously, don't miss out on a good thing and get yours today.

DO YOU CLASSIFY YOUR FRIENDS? Well you should. Keep them all filed away in order. Keep your friends up to date in your handy address book from Ethel Meserve's. These handsome leather bound address books have matching photo cases. Together they would make a lovely and useful gift.

START YOUR SPRING SEMESTER IN STYLE Arrive back on campus with your new American Tourister luggage from Ethel Meserve's. This luggage is light and it holds so much.

Well, your friend Gabbi is going into hibernation until finals are over, but not until Ethel and I wish you good luck on your exams. Have fun over your semester break and drive safely. See you next semester.
