

GOOD LUCK TOMORROW—Armando Vega, the number one scorer in the U.S. team trials Thursday, and Boris Shakhlin, the world's greatest gymnast, talked over tonight's meet in Rec Hall yesterday. Vega competed in the 1956 Olympics while Shakhlin won four gold medals in Rome this summer.

GREEK GODDESS?—No, just Polina Astakhova practicing her routine on the balance bar in Rec Hall yesterday. Miss Astakhova was the 1960 Olympic champ on the uneven parallel bars.

TOP FORM—Larissa Latynina shows why she won the 1956 and 1960 all-around title in the Olympics as she works out on the balance bar in Rec Hall last night. Miss Latynina and five other Soviet women gymnasts will perform in tonight's meet.

Maloney Says U.S. Can Win

Boris Shakhlin, Olympic all-around champion, is looking forward to a good meet. "How good we are, you'll see tomorrow," he said.

Maloney gave his team a chance to beat the Soviet Union. "If our boys hit, we can beat them," he said. "I hope we hit, and I hope they don't."

"They look sharp though, Japan's win in the Olympics last year will make them a better team," he continued.

The USSR finished second to Japan in the games while Uncle Sam ranked fifth.

"With them, gymnastics is everything. They train all the time. If we could get everybody working like these people do, we could beat them," Maloney said.

Penn State coach Gene Wettstone was disappointed that Weiss and Werner didn't make the team. "I thought that Greg had the best all-around score in the trials," he said.

The Soviet men's team consists of Titov, Shakhlin, Albert Azaryan, Valeri Kerdemilidi, Nicolai Miligulo and Vladimir Portnoi.

The USSR women, led by Larissa Ltykina, beat the American women's team by less than four points at West Chester Wednesday night, 153.199 to 149.967.

Other members of the Soviet women's team are Polina Astakhova, Sofia Muratova, Tamara Ljukhina, Margarita Nikolayeva and Tamara Manina.

The Soviet and American teams and officials were feted at a dinner last night by Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

After dinner the two groups danced and talked for about two hours before the Soviets went back to the Nittany Lion Inn for the night.

Tonight's meet will be televised over Eidophor and WFBG-TV, Altoona. Rec Hall was completely sold out two hours after the tickets went on sale last Monday.

Frosh Gymnasts Host Temple in Season Debut

Three Lion freshman teams will see action today. The frosh gymnasts meet Temple at 12:30 in Rec Hall. George Keys, All-Philadelphia gymnast, will make his first appearance for State.

Wally Colender's cagers try for their first win of the season at Ogontz this evening after losing 69-65 to Bucknell Tuesday.

Dave Adams' matmen battle the Cornell frosh at Ithaca, N.Y. They lost a 15-14 decision to Lehigh in their opener.
