The Penn State Players have announced a limited extension of the run of the popular Tennessee Williams drama, "Summer and Smoke," which closed last weekend at Center Stage.

Formerly, Chekhov's "The Three Sisters," was slated to move into Center Stage on Feb. 17. The drama, however, has been postponed until the Spring in conjunction with the concerted effort of the department and Players to get the new production studios into shape as quickly as possible.

Bookstore Plea--

In detail the book exchange of 24 years ago operated much as the Used Book Exchange does today. Students could set their own price, which could not exceed two-thirds of the original price. A five cent service charge was collected from both seller and buyer.

In that first two weeks of operation, 915 books traded hands and $81.32 in profits were divided between the five original committee members who put in 428 hours of work on the project.

Golatz, Kaufman Publish Study On Pa. Unemployment

By ROCHELLE MICHAELS

The old saying "go west, young man" is just as true today as it ever was according to Jacob J. Kaufman, professor of economics.

Kaufman and Helmut J. Golatz, associate professor of industrial relations, have published a study of Pennsylvania's major problem titled "Chronic Unemployment in Pennsylvania."

The report says that Pennsylvania has failed to readjust its industrial structure in a way that would be economically desirable.

"Apparently the growth industries of Pennsylvania have not been those which take up the slack caused by the losses of employment in the coal and railroad industries," it continues.

However, since the greatest number of the unemployed are skilled workers, Kaufman said that this situation will have little effect on University graduates.

Kaufman added that placement opportunities for all college graduate will be "tremendous" in future years, but that Pennsylvania will have fewer offerings than most other sections of the country.

According to Kaufman, graduates in the business, professional and semi-professional fields will not have to worry about job placement because the low birth rate of the 1930's has caused a shortage of people in the 25-44 age group. However, there will be more opportunities outside of this state.
