

Undergrads Coin New Punch Lines

By DICK LEIGHTON

Ever since the college crowd began uttering such profound statements as "Twenty-three skidoo" and "OOp-boop-be-doop" there has been a tendency for undergraduates to coin their own punch lines.

Over the years, the esoteric laugh-line has developed into the subtle quip. Gone are the days of the crude "Let's matri-culate together, baby," or "did you hear the one about the coed who . . ."

Funny men now-a-days are using the psychological approach. They are letting the straight man think of his own punch line. A well placed Yogi Bear laugh or an emphatic "Goll-ee" are getting as many laughs today as Uncle Millie at his best.

At present the up-and-coming smile maker seems to be the simple, incomplete phrase—"It's about this . . ." or its plural, "It's about these . . ."

This cartoon type line works very well in the campus setting. Picture the coed standing in front of her dorm at about 11:45 at night. It is cold, her teeth are chattering and all she has on is a bath robe and three pin curls. It is the usual University fire drill.

To bring gales of laughter from her fellow sufferers she merely looks forlornly at her hostess and says "It's about these Housing regulations . . ." Picture the cadet in ranks dejectedly mumbling, "It's about these militarists . . ." or the student with sheer agony showing on his face handing in a blue-book and saying "It's about this guy Aristotle . . ." "It's about these Collegian articles . . ."
