

Williams Gone, Red Sox Hope Jensen, Geiger Can Carry Load

(Another in a series of major league team prospects written under the managers' own bylines.)

Boston Red Sox
By MIKE HIGGINS

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — It's going to take the Red Sox a little while to get used to playing without Ted Williams. You can't help but miss a guy with his great hitting ability.

If Jackie Jensen hadn't decided to come out of retirement, I would have been plenty worried about our batting attack for this season. But now that he has come back we'll have some strong right-handed hitting to go with an improvement at several other positions.

What I like most about the Boston club is the situation in the outfield and at second base. With Jensen in right field, Gary Geiger in center and young Carl Yastrzemski taking Williams' place in left, we have a sound outfield.

Geiger was really going good until he got that collapsed lung in the middle of last season. He's healthy again now and we expect him to pick up where he left off.

Yastrzemski is a fine prospect. He's only 21 and hit .339 in the American Association last season.

I wish we were as well of at all the other positions as we are at second base where we have Pete Runnels, who led the American League in batting, and Chuck Schilling.

Schilling was the outstanding second baseman in the American Association and he batted .314. Frank Malzone will be at third base again and I'm counting on him and Jensen to provide most of our right-handed power.

We lost two catchers, Eddie Sadowski and Haywood Sullivan in the draft. The way it looks at this point, Russ Nixon and Jim Pagliaroni will divide the job behind the plate. Nixon is a lefty hitter and Pagliaroni bats righty.

We helped our pitching staff by getting Gene Conley from the Phillies. Bill Monbouquette and Billy Muffet are two other right-handers I'm counting on heavily.

Both showed signs of becoming star pitchers last season and I look for even better years from them in 1961.

Same Old Ted, Fighting Already

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Ted Williams reported to the Red Sox as batting instructor yesterday and wasn't in camp a half-hour when he engaged in an argument with a Boston sports writer and exchanged words with a New York writer who was a visitor at the camp.

The former Sox left fielder walked up to the Boston writer, clenched his fist and said "I'll punch your nose off..." After a bitter exchange of words the argument was broken up by bystanders.

Williams told reporters later the Boston writer had called up his former wife around Christmas time and asked her what Ted had given their daughter for Christmas.
