HI, EVERYBODY!

Say you're wondering why you ever came to Penn State after that sampling of various kinds of weather we had over the weekend? going from 70 degree weather to snow in 24 hours was too much for me — I've decided to hibernate until the snow and Monsoon seasons pass. So if you see a lot of me in Ethel Meserve's, you'll know why. It's so conveniently located — near the Corner Room and other local spots of interest. Ethel has a new selection of items for Spring (I keep hoping it's just around the corner), and you're welcome to drop in either to browse or buy.

SPEAKING OF THE MONSOONS . . .

they're coming, as you can guess from the weekend. (For you Freshmen, these rains are like the most boring professor you have — they never stop!) Be prepared — Ethel has a large stock of pastel and print umbrellas for you guys, that those large black all-purpose umbrellas for yo uguys, that will keep you (and all your friends that decide to crowd under it with you) dry.

WHILE YOU'RE AVOIDING THE RAIN,

you'll probably end up playing Bridge, instead of doing homework like all "reasonable" people would (tell that one to your prof!), so get all set with tallies, rule books, and those lovely Congress cards from Ethel's large stock.

Happy weather predicting, Gabbi
