

Hopefuls Apply For Fall Term

A total of 23,792 applications for admission to the University for the fall term have been requested by prospective students, according to Robert G. Bernreuter, dean of admissions and registrar.

Of this total, 21,483 requests were for admission to the freshman class, 595 for associate degree applications and 1714 for advanced standing applications.

Bernreuter said that of the applications mailed out, 13,096 have been returned—12,076 from candidates for the freshman class, 300 from associate degree candidates and 663 from students with advanced standing.

Approximately 4200 freshmen will be admitted for the fall term, Bernreuter said. Of these, he said, 2850 will be men and 1350 women.

The University has offered admission to 3904 students, Bernreuter said. A total of 2334 men and 1570 women have been accepted so far. These are the figures for the main campus. A total of 4386 acceptances were sent out for all the commonwealth campuses including University Park.

Bernreuter estimated that between 250 and 500 freshmen will be on campus for the summer term. After the quota for fall admission is reached, the surplus of accepted students will be given an opportunity to enter the University for the summer term, he said.

Freshmen entering in June who were in the first or second fifth of their high school class will not have to take the Entrance College Board scholastic aptitude test. However, the examination will be required for all students entering the University beginning with the fall term, Bernreuter explained.

Final freshman enrollment figures for the summer term have not yet been compiled by the admissions office, Bernreuter said.

He explained that summer enrollment for freshmen will be limited this year because of the necessity for new students to participate in the University's preparatory counseling program. The break between the beginning of the summer term on June 15 and the end of the spring semester, June 6, he said, will not allow enough time for the counseling program.

Graduate Tests Slated for April

The next admission test for graduate study in business has been scheduled for April 8.

Applications for the test, however, must be forwarded to the Educational Testing Service at Princeton, N.J., not later than March 25.

Information concerning the test, application forms and the application fee is available through Dr. Robert L. Clewett, associate professor of marketing, 122 Boucke or the test supervisor, Dr. Andrew V. Kozak, associate professor of education, 311C Burrows.

North Halls Defeats Card Playing Motion

North Halls council defeated a motion last night which would not permit men in groups to play cards in their individual rooms.

Some of the men were playing cards constantly and were neglecting their studies according to Wayne Ulsh, council president. Each house president took a vote among his men to see what they thought of the motion, and in each house, it was overwhelmingly defeated.

Because the motion was defeated by the council, the whole area will not have the same restrictions on card playing. Any action taken will be taken by the individual houses as their residence hall counselors see fit, Ulsh said.

In other business, the council announced that they will hold another "Spring Swing" dance Saturday in Warnock Lounge.

The theme for this week's dance is "Smooth Sounds for the Still of the Night." It will last from 8:30 p.m. to midnight, and the cost will be 35 cents per couple. Dress is informal.

The council plans to hold a dance every Saturday night.

According to Spring Week chairman, Richard Kroll, plans for the North Halls entry are progressing satisfactorily. North Halls will work with Hoyt Hall for this event.

The council has also appointed a group of men who will put out a North Halls newsletter.

The council decided not to change the dining hall dress code which does not permit men to wear dungarees in the dining hall. There had been some infractions of this rule, Ulsh said.

Leonides Feels Effect Of Community Living

With the coming of the community living program the need for Leonides, the independent women's association, has been questioned by council members and administrators.

Dorothy J. Lipp, Dean of Women, has stated that in the future the services provided by Leonides will be provided by the community councils. Dean Lipp felt that in 10 years Leonides would no longer exist.

Several independent women commented recently for the Daily Collegian on whether they felt there was a need for Leonides and whether it should continue or disband.

"Leonides is on its way out," according to Barbara Phillips, junior resident counselor in McKee. "The emphasis on activities for the independent woman should be put within the community living area. If each area has women on the community council, the views and ideas of the independent woman could be presented there for consideration," she added.

"Leonides should do more service-wise if they are to remain a campus organization," Mary Lou Fries, junior resident counselor in McKee, said.

"I don't know much about Leonides," said a sophomore in counseling from Pittsburgh, "maybe if they were doing more, I might hear about them. Activities for the independent woman on a small scale within the community instead of campus-wide, would be best," she added.

A junior felt Leonides wasn't active or publicized enough. "I was going to try to work on a Leonides committee this year, but I didn't know where to sign up and I couldn't find anyone who did know," she said. "Leonides is almost useless now, but the community councils aren't doing much better," she said.

Beverly Cades, formerly a Leonides Council member, said she felt Leonides does serve an important purpose because it gives independents a chance to participate in activities.

"It provides a stepping stone to other activities," she said. Miss Cades also felt that Leonides should join ISA. "It is not beneficial for the group to work alone since all the independent groups could accomplish so much more together," she said.
