Faculty Salary Survey Reveals Low Pay Scale, Little Regard for Rank

By ANN PALMER

Findings of a recent survey on faculty salaries indicate that the salary scale of the University ranks below average in comparison with all other colleges and universities in the United States.

This statement is a result of a study made by the Committee on Salaries and Tenure of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors. Questionnaires distributed by the local chapter were evaluated for 73.6 per cent of the entire faculty at the University.

Litman Says He Will Pick Lion Star

Special to the Collegian
Pittsburgh, Pa., March 13—Lenny Litman, the general manager of the Pittsburgh franchise in the American Basketball League, announced today that he would pick Mark DuMars in the league draft next weekend in Chicago.

Until March 1, Litman had never seen DuMars play. That night he watched the first half of the Penn State-Carnegie Tech game here and left with a glowing impression.

"He's the kind of guy we're looking for," Litman said simply before leaving for the Pitt Field House to watch Tom Stith, the St. Bonaventure All-American.

Apparently Stith made quite an impression, too, because Litman said he would pick him as Pittsburgh's territorial choice in the upcoming draft.

Litman said he will also pick these players: Ned Twyman and Bob Slobodnik, both of Duquesne; Lee Patrone of West Virginia; Jack Egan of St. Joseph's; Tony Jackson of St. Johns and possibly John Fridley of Pitt.

DuMars is the second leading scorer in Penn State history.

"This seems like a real good break after a real bad year," DuMars said. "I didn't think anybody was interested in me."

DuMars averaged 15.2 this year after averaging 21.3 during his junior year. He was hampered by an ankle injury and a flu attack.

In a national rating by the AAUP, all colleges and universities are ranked on a scale from a high of AA to a low of F according to salary compensation of faculty members. The University now ranks at about the D level.

The study also found that the average salary of a full professor at the University is only 1.77 times that of the average instructor whereas in the entire country only the F level schools go below this figure. All others range from 1.85 to 2.65.

"Penn State, however, has always had a high instructor salary rate. This is not necessarily good because it means that we have to buy our new young people into the field," commented R. Wallace Brewster, professor of political science and chairman of the committee.

Another aspect of the survey revealed a great overlap in salary range and rank of faculty members. For example, the highest paid full professor at the University, receiving $14,040 per year, has an income of over 100 per cent more than the lowest paid full professor who received $6264 per year.

Comparing the University with all schools in the United States receiving from a C to an A rating, which total 61, Penn State lags far behind.

The AAUP, in an official explanation of the value of these salary ratings, explained that many schools with low salary ratings have good teaching quality, but, if the low rate continues over a period of time, the caliber of teachers is bound to suffer.

It was brought out at a meeting of all interested faculty mem-

Ribicoff Opposes Private School Aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Welfare Abraham Ribicoff said yesterday he is absolutely opposed to including any nonpublic school aid in the Kennedy administration's $2.3-billion aid to education bill.

To consider public and parochial school aid together would be "most tragic," Ribicoff told a House Education subcommittee, and would jeopardize the administration program.

At the same time Ribicoff refused to commit the administration in advance on any separate legislation to aid private schools.

IFC Rush Program Discussed, Amended

The proposed four-term rush program for the Interfraternity Council was discussed and amended at last night's meeting. The program, proposed on Feb. 27 by Herbert Goldstein, IFC Rush Chairman, was amended and has been referred to the IFC Rushing Committee pending approval at the next IFC meeting.

The proposed section of the program which would make it necessary for a freshman wishing to rush to have a 2.2 All-University average was deleted. With this deletion, it is possible for the individual houses to determine their own policy concerning averages of their rushees. Average for pledging is a 2.0 All-University.

The major portion of the proposed program for the four-term rush was accepted by the council in its discussion. Deferred fall term rush, two rounds of Sunday open houses, two Saturday night parties and a rush registration are among the proposals pending acceptance at the March 20 meeting.

In other business, Ronald Novak, president of IFC, announced that election of IFC officers for next year would be held at the next meeting. Novak introduced the candidates and self-nominations from the floor took place.

Candidates for IFC president are: Gerald Logue, Acacia; Richard Pigossi, Phi Gamma Delta; and Herbert Goldstein, Phi Sigma Delta. Nominees for vice president are: Richard Moyer, Alpha Gamma Rho, and Steven Baron, Phi Epsilon Pi.

Eugene Chaiken, Beta Sigma Rho, and Thomas Ritenbaugh, Phi Mu Delta, are candidates for secretary-treasurer.

Mostly Cloudy, Cold Weather Will Continue

Big, wet, clinging snow flakes fell for about an hour yesterday afternoon covering roads, lawns and sidewalks with a treacherous coating of slush.

The snow was part of a widespread band of precipitation which covered a large part of the eastern half of the nation.

Heavy snow is expected to fall today from eastern New York and northern New Jersey northeastward through New England.

The powerful storm that will probably cripple transportation in much of that area by tonight should remain far enough east of this area so that central Pennsylvania will be spared appreciable snow.

The local forecast indicates mostly cloudy and cold weather for today with a few periods of light snow or snow flurries. The high temperature should be near 38 degrees.

Tonight should be partly cloudy and cold with a low temperature of 28.

Partly cloudy and milder weather is likely tomorrow.

"A serious constitutional question is involved," he said, which would require detailed study of any such proposed legislation.

Ribicoff spoke out as Francis Cardinal Spellman, archbishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, repeated his opposition to any federal aid program that excludes private and church-related schools.

In a statement issued in New York, the cardinal said, "If the Congress decides there should be federal aid, then certainly any legislation should conform to the principles of social justice, equal treatment and non-discrimination."

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., chairman of the Senate Education subcommittee which is also conducting hearings on the legislation, urged Catholic leaders to refrain from pressing for a parochial school amendment.

Some Congress members and Catholic spokesmen have said the administrative bill should be amended to provide for low-interest, long-term loans to church and other private schools.

Kennedy, who contends direct assistance to private schools would be unconstitutional, told his news conference last Wednesday he believes the Constitution also bars federal loans to private secondary schools on any across-the-board basis.

Morse said Catholic spokesmen will have a "great opportunity" when they testify later to announce they are withholding their amendment and thus remove a possible roadblock to passage of a general aid to education bill.

University Asks For Allocation Of VHF Channel

The University announced today that it had petitioned the Federal Communications Commission for allocation of VHF (Very High Frequency) Channel 3.

The petition asked for the channel on the basis of the University's potential service to the people of Pennsylvania.

"In anticipation of getting the channel, the University is reconditioning Carnegie to be able to handle the necessary broadcasting operation," Leslie P. Greenhill, associate director of Division of Academic Research and Services, said yesterday.

In the petition to the FCC it was stated that by constructing an antenna tower on Rattlesnake Mountain in Black Moshannon State Park, 25 miles from campus, and by using a 44 kilowatt transmitter, most of the central Pennsylvania area could be reached.

There has been a UHF (Ultra High Frequency) channel allocated to the State College area, but UHF is not practical for this situation, according to Dr. C. R. Carpenter, director of DARS.

One of the objections to having a channel where we want it, Greenhill said, would be that it might overlap Channel 3 in Philadelphia or Channel 3 in Harrisonburg, Va.

Greenwich Village Set Up in Schwab

DOING THE CONGO: Cast members and other students connected with the Thespians' production of "Wonderful Town" formed a Congo line from Sparks to Schwab yesterday at noon. The play is being given this weekend in Schwab.

Shortly before their rehearsal last night, members of the Penn State Thespians crew were found crawling around on their hands and knees ironing the huge 48 by 25 ft. canvas backdrop.

The drop will provide the setting of a typical Greenwich Village street in Leonard Bernstein's "Wonderful Town" to be given Thursday through Saturday nights in Schwab.

Tickets for all performances, including a special Saturday matinee, will go on sale at 1:30 today at the Hetzel Union desk.

The play is about two young women from Ohio who come to Greenwich Village in hopes of "getting a break." Ruth, a literary hopeful, is played by Anne Grant, senior in business education from State College.

Her cohort, Eileen, trying to enter into New York's whirl of show business, is portrayed by Susan Brown, junior in theater arts from Chatham, N.J.

The colorful backdrop used for the play is an abstract scene reproducing Christopher Street in the "Village," from the tall rows of apartment houses to an insignificant trash container on the street corner.
