

Student Playwrights Aided by '5 O'Clock'

By ANN PALMER
 Student playwrights have the chance to see their original plays produced by the 5 O'Clock Theater, in performances held at 5 p.m. every Tuesday in the Little Theater in the basement of Old Main. The theater was started by Warren S. Smith, associate professor of theater arts, as a place to produce selected plays written in his playwriting course. Smith recommends the best plays written in his Playwriting 21 class to members of 5 O'Clock and from there students interested in direction of the scripts are free to select and experiment. "The main feature of such a project is that interested persons can experiment and learn techniques of the theater at will," commented Judson Sanderson, graduate student in theater arts from Lemont. Students interested in theater experimentation can select a recommended script to work with. They must then select a cast, recruit a technical crew and direct the production. In a 5 O'Clock theater production lighting, costuming and sound experimentation are widely used. All procedures are the same as for a large scale production except that no major scenery is constructed. Some "script-in-hand" productions are given each year in which the rehearsal time is shortened. Since all casts and crew are recruited by the play's director, the 5 O'Clock Theater sponsors teas at 3 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday in the Green Room of Schwab to provide a means of contact for all persons interested in the project.

Harrison Gets Chem-Phys Post

Robert H. Harrison, junior in chemical engineering from Shamokin, was elected president of the Chemistry-Physics Student Council last night.

Warren E. Long, junior in physics from Morrisville, was elected vice president and Quentin Looney, junior in chemistry from West Sunbury, secretary-treasurer.

Plans for the Open House on April 8 being sponsored by the Colleges of Chemistry and Physics, Engineering and Architecture and Mineral Industries have been completed, according to Harrison. The Open House will include scientific demonstrations, exhibitions and lectures.

Chess Team Loses

The Penn State varsity chess team suffered its first defeat of the season, 3-2, to Carnegie Tech Saturday in Pittsburgh.

Penn State was hampered by the absence of Tony Cantone, top player for the State team, who was unable to make the trip.
