

'Sit-ins' Spark Movement For Equality—Proctor

By DOTI DRASHER

Negro sit-ins in the South have sparked a snowballing movement for the achievement of racial equality for the Negro, Dr. Samuel Proctor, president of the Agriculture and Technical College of North Carolina, said Saturday night.

At a dessert forum in the Eisenhower Chapel, he said the first widely publicized sit-ins began at the Agricultural and Technical Colleges in Greensboro.

These began the "long process of evolution: social reform," Proctor said. The South was caught unaware when the sit-ins started and the Negro had succeeded in unveiling his aspirations, Proctor said.

"We deeply desire real freedom and equality for all Negroes," he said. In his opinion, the concentration of college students in Greensboro aided in acceptance of sit-ins.

"This was the awakening and quickening of the movement," he added. Negroes in other places feel the same way but have little hope of changing their circumstances.

"Will the college students and others have the maturity to carry the movement through or is it just a publicity stunt?" Proctor asked. He said he felt that they would carry the plan through. "I think we're in for a long winter with it," he added.

The problems of prejudice and discrimination still must be erased. Others must work to overcome economic problems too, he added, to breed stable, more socially acceptable people. This must be balanced with the political protest movement. The social protest is ahead of the social adjustment.

On the subject of integration in the states such as Mississippi, Proctor said he felt it would have to begin at the college level particularly in the graduate schools.

Society cannot be so radically changed overnight, but gradually and these are the ways it can be done, he said.

Corso to Present Paper

Dr. John F. Corso, professor of psychology, will present a paper at the forthcoming annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Academy of Science on March 31 at Gettysburg.

The title of the paper will be "The Neural Quantum Theory and the Threshold of Audibility."

Opera Star Sings European Selections

By ANN PALMER

Victoria de los Angeles, acclaimed soprano star of opera houses all over the world, thrilled concert-goers Friday night with her complete mastery of such difficult numbers as Handel's "O, Had I Jubal's Lyre" from "Joshua."

Miss de los Angeles, accompanied by Paul Berl at the piano, executed a fast moving program of musical selections from France, Italy, Germany and Spain.

Dressed in a blue dress, she added to the mood of the Spanish works by wearing a long white lace shawl during the second half of the program.

After the performance an enthusiastic autograph collector was heard to say, "There's only one word for her—she's great!"

Miss de los Angeles speaks French, Italian, German and Spanish fluently but she has a slight difficulty in pronouncing some English words. "Your language is very difficult for me some times. My English is still very young. There are things I must remember about some of your words, but I sometimes don't remember what they are," she said.

Miss de los Angeles was accompanied to the University by her husband, Enrique Magrina, who assisted her in interpreting unfamiliar English phrases during an interview.

Miss de los Angeles laughingly commented to her husband that she should have brought her guitar. She is proficient at the piano as well as the guitar which she plays "only when specifically asked to."

When asked what her greatest non-musical ambition was, Miss de los Angeles replied, "Someday soon I want to have some quiet months in our house in Barcelona or up in the Spanish mountains."

Miss de los Angeles and her husband arrived at the University exhausted after being detained by snow on their way from New York. She commented, "The train was very nice, but I certainly got tired of sitting."

The soprano has other pastimes besides music. "More than anything I love to read, I think. During the summers I read and read, but during the season there's a trouble," she said.

Ticket distribution for the next Artist Series program, The National Ballet of Canada, will begin at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday April 5 at the Hetzel Union desk. The program will be held April 9 in Recreation Hall.

Science Foundation Grants Fellowships To Grad Students

Eight Penn State graduate students have been awarded the National Science Foundation Summer Fellowships for 1961 for former graduate teaching assistants.

All eight have been or are now graduate teaching assistants at the University. They are: Chemistry, James Brady from State College; Geology, Gilbert Brenner from State College and George Clark from Boalsburg; Mathematics, Herman Biesterfeldt from Woodhaven, N.Y., Kenneth Magill from State College and James Sieber from Blairs Mills; Physics, Michael DerSarkissian from State College; Zoology, Ronald Rhein from Reading.

The fellowships pay the recipients a weekly stipend of $50 to $75.

IFC Applications Available

Applications for chairmanship and membership on IFC committees will be available at the Hetzel Union desk from April 7 until April 24.

North Halls Men To Vote Today On Dress Code

North Halls Council voted to hold a popular election today in the area on abolishing the Dining Hall Dress Code.

According to Jim Burzon, chairman of the dining hall dress committee, the main complaint of the students is the requirement that no sweat shirts and dungarees be worn to lunch. This is an inconvenience to some students who have to wear them to classes, he said.

At the council meeting last week, a petition, signed by more than 100 North Halls residents was presented, which called for a popular vote in the area on the code.

This code, which has been in effect in the area since Feb. 20, stipulated dress requirements for weekdays, Sundays and special dinners. It also requires the dining hall checkers to turn in the meal ticket number of violators to the committee.

At last night's meeting, the petition was declared valid, and according to the constitution, a popular vote must be held as asked for, and the results will be binding on council.

The students will be asked to vote yes or no to abolishing the dress code. For the vote to be official, at least 50 per cent of the area's residents must vote.

Voting will take place from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., and from 5 to 6 p.m. today in Warnock lounge. Matriculation cards and meal tickets will be needed to vote.
