

Nixon's Uncle Sees 'Frontier' as 'Deal'

By LYNNE CEREFICE

The New Frontier program of the Kennedy administration is a current version of FDR's "New Deal," according to Ernest L. Nixon, uncle of former vice president Richard M. Nixon.

In its extensive program of increased appropriations in the

Exam Plan To Remain Unchanged

The Senate Committee on Educational Policy will take no action to change the proposed final exam procedure under the four-term plan, according to John J. Schanz, chairman of the committee.

Under this plan, final exams will be given in the last 75-minute period of each class.

Schanz explained that the committee will not act on the recommended changes in this exam schedule which were presented in an informational report before the University Senate last week.

The report included a suggestion to lengthen all class meetings during the last three days of a term from 75 minutes to 2 hours in order to provide for a longer exam period.

This would have been done by extending class hours into the evening.

Schanz said that his committee has decided against these proposals and would like to try the original exam plan for one term before considering any changes.

This trial period, he said, would provide a basis for any future changes the committee might wish to consider.

Schanz also explained that the present exam plan could not be altered in time for the fall term.

national budget (defense, unemployment, aid to depressed areas, federal aid to education, increase in the minimum wage, etc.), Nixon said the Kennedy administration has revived the fourth freedom of the New Deal—freedom from want.

He said that this program immediately brings to mind the question, "What is this administration doing to build a good America?"

Nixon, a former professor of plant pathology at the University, said that the Kennedy program can only lead to debasement of the American dollar.

He cited Gresham's Law of economics which states that "when you debase money, morality goes out the window, and the nation begins to die."

For example, in proposing increased unemployment benefits, Nixon said that the administration is guaranteeing people a living thereby removing the need for individual initiative.

"We need more schools, but instead of inflating currency wouldn't it be better to use barns for schools?" Nixon said.

In other criticisms of the new administration's policies, Nixon said that there is no "New Frontier" in agriculture.

He referred to the Kennedy farm program which proposes the establishment of a national farmer committee for each farm commodity or group of related commodities.

In effect this would take the drafting of farm legislation from Congress and put it into the hands of the particular farmers who would benefit from it.

The fallacy in this plan, Nixon said is that "you can't even get a group of farmers together in a county let alone the entire country."

Seniors—what can Kearfott's personalized training program offer You?

Check the experiences of These Recent Graduates

JAMES T. ORRICO
 Stevens Institute of Technology, '60

During his training program, Jim has already gained valuable experience in two diversified areas. In the Gyrodynamics Test Engineering Laboratory, he worked on the design of transistor circuitry and test equipment. At present, he is assigned to the Field Service Department which is responsible for preparing manuals and technical courses. Jim plans to expand his experience even further—into both administrative and technical areas of Gyrodynamics. Eventually, he intends to concentrate on highly advanced systems engineering. Right now he's busy laying the groundwork in the broad spectrum of specialties which systems engineering embraces. Jim feels that this training program is tailor-made to prepare him for exactly the kind of work he wants to do.

PETER L. TODD
 Cornell University, '57

Because Pete wanted first-hand experience in several engineering areas—development, design, testing, and manufacturing, he was given engineering responsibilities on a variety of projects. During his assignment to the Systems Electronics Laboratory, for example, he helped develop and test an aircraft navigation system that is now fully operational. After completing his training program, Pete decided to ask for permanent assignment to the Precision Wound Components Section. One of the most important advantages of working at Kearfott, Pete reports, is the project engineer approach. Under it, you can develop specific skills, and, at the same time, gain the engineering perspective that comes from seeing a project through from concept to completed product.

CHARLES R. ELLISON, Jr.
 Villanova University, '60

What impressed Charlie most about his Kearfott training program was the immediate opportunity to apply theoretical analysis and optimum design techniques to realistic and stimulating problems. At the same time, he gained a comprehensive experience in the many other engineering aspects of carrying a project through to completion. Encouraged by tuition reimbursement and company sponsored courses, Charlie is now continuing his academic training toward an MS degree—and perhaps beyond. With midtown New York only 40 minutes away, he has easy access to the many fine colleges within the New York/New Jersey area—Columbia, NYU, Stevens, Newark College of Engineering, and others.

VINCENT MONTALTO, Jr.
 Penn State, '60

Summer employment with the company in 1959 gave Vince all the reasons he needed to join Kearfott after graduation. He likes the way Kearfott Project Engineers STAY WITH A PROJECT—from the study phase right through design, prototype, production, and reliability testing. They are not only responsible for all technical aspects, but for quality and price structure of finished hardware as well. Vince finds this philosophy opens the way for growth along a variety of paths—gives him experience and perspective in practically every phase of engineering. A family man, Vince enjoys pleasant suburban living with his wife and son in a nearby community—one of many fine residential areas within a 10-mile radius.

A career with a company whose size has grown 20-fold in ten years

— From 300 to 6000 Employees
 — 25 New Laboratories

Kearfott's remarkable record of expansion is a reflection of its achievements in electronics, electro-mechanical components, precision instrumentation—and now, the development of complete systems. The continued expansion of the company means exceptional growth opportunities for recent graduates in all six major divisions:

- Systems Engineering Division
- Gyrodynamics Division
- Electro-mechanical Division
- Precision Components Division
- Electronics Division
- Power Equipment Division

In keeping with the dynamic atmosphere at Kearfott, a personalized training program gives the young engineer the freedom to explore many engineering fields before selecting the broad area best suited to his career interests. Performance leads quickly to advancement through Kearfott's policy of PROMOTION BY MERIT. For detailed information, see the Kearfott representative when he visits your campus.
