

Juba to Ask Liquor Law Repassage

State College Police Chief John Juba said yesterday that he will ask the borough council to re-enact an old ordinance that prohibited persons under 21 from entering any establishment that serves liquor, unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

The old ordinance was amended last May to allow minors to enter establishments with liquor licenses until 7 p.m. Juba said that this amendment is contrary to state law and that he wants the old law back on the books.

Juba said that the present law that allows minors to frequent such establishments was passed during his absence and that it was passed because of what he termed "pressure from the outside."

"I don't think the tavern owners will lose that much business," he said, "and besides we must comply with the state law."

The old law carried a punishment of a fine of not less than $25 or more than $100, or between 10 to 30 days in jail.

Juba said that he has three main reasons for wanting the old law back on the books. "First," he said, "by state law no one under the age of 21 is allowed to buy liquor or beer. There is no use in encouraging minors to break this law, by allowing them to enter a place that serves liquor."

"Secondly, I feel that particularly college students can't afford to go out every night. The students of Penn State are here for an education and they certainly can't study if they are going out every night," he said.

"Finally I think it is unfair to the parents of the students, who are at home working like a dog while their son or daughter is out running around. I feel that it is part of our duty to see that the student is getting the education he was sent here for," he said.

Students, Townspeople Give 332 Pints of Blood

The Red Cross bloodmobile which made a two-day visit to campus March 21 and 22 collected a total of 332 pints of blood from students and townspeople.

The amount collected was well over the 260 pints which the local Red Cross chapter set as a goal for the visit. Mrs. Walter Coutu, executive secretary of the State College chapter, said.

According to Mrs. Coutu, 89 of the donors gave blood for the first time. She said she was pleased with this total because an individual who once participates in the program usually becomes a regular donor.

Three of the students who participated in the drive this spring became "Gallon Donors." They are Gerald Wetzel, senior in physics from Indiana; Robert Heist, junior in business administration from Bethlehem; and Charles Dorantt from York. These students have each donated over a period of time a total of a gallon of blood to the Red Cross.

In a letter to President Eric A. Walker, Mrs. Coutu said that the bloodmobile had been "highly successful." She also said the student support and donations represented "another demonstration of student's participation in the life of the community."

Coeds Rehearse For Water Show

Everybody get in place, fasten your chin straps, start with the music . . . and try not to splash!!!!

No, Arthur Murray hasn't started an underwater studio, these are orders familiar to almost a hundred coeds beginning final practice sessions for the Annual Acquacade to be held next week.

Tickets are on sale at the pool office for the swim shows, scheduled for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings at 8 in White Hall.

The routines for the program were written by club members who may direct their own routines and swim any part in it.

This year's routines assume the names of islands and seem to carry the audience to such far-off places as Trinidad, Iceland, Hawaii, Catalina, and even Alcatraz. Polly Mitten, show director, said.

Treasure Island, too, is depicted. Several of the beautiful amphibians portray blissful mermaids who, while playing contentedly, are attacked by a band of pirates.

The swim club converts the White Hall pool to make the audience feel as if they are in the midst of an Iceland winter or on a tropic isle. This was quite an interesting challenge to the members, Miss Mitten said. The tremendously creative genius of the girls is commendable, she added.

Susie Dinsmore, president of the swim club, and Miss Mitten will demonstrate their aquatic skills in the performances of a synchronic duet.

The costuming for the production was designed especially for the occasion by the Swim Club members.
