Dickerson Explains Peace Corps Plans

The University may be asked to provide a short range training program for a percentage of the group which will be selected to participate in the first Peace Corps' projects, Dr. Russel B. Dickerson, associate dean and residence director of the College of Agriculture, said yesterday.

Peace Corps' officials have announced that the initial program is expected to be in effect by the fall of 1962, with about 500 students participating. These students will be trained at various colleges and universities which will probably be named early in the summer. Training will concentrate on language, history, and culture of the area to which the volunteer will be sent.

Dickerson, speaking to the Agriculture faculty, said that the University committee investigating the Peace Corps and its possibilities on this campus, has divided their study into three areas. These areas are:

- An inventory of the people connected with the University who have had work experience abroad and who could be of service to the Peace Corps program.
- A study of the possible role of the University in respect to the Peace Corps' objectives.
- Recommendations as to the extent of the University's participation in the program.

Reorganization List Distributed By Committee

Duane Alexander's reorganization committee on the SGA constitution yesterday distributed mimeographed sheets which listed the changes it has proposed.

These proposals were contrasted with the powers of the existing constitution to "demonstrate the differences in the two constitutions and arouse student interest," Alexander said.

Alexander said this action was not a protest against present SGA action but "was an attempt to present the student body with the basic ideas the committee proposed."

The sheet stressed the changes in representation and the increased powers of the Assembly under the proposed plan.

Under the community proposal for representation, Assembly would be composed of residents from the fraternity areas, town housing, women's residence halls, and the men's residence halls.

They would be nominated by the governing body of each community which would make specifications for nominations. Critics have said this would eliminate the right of a student to run on petition and be elected by the student body at large.
