

Alum Urges Grads To Stay in State

By SARALEE ORTON

(This is the fourth article in a series on the activities of the Alumni Association as they concern students.)
In the latest issue of the "Penn State Alumni News," J. E. Holtzinger, chairman of the 1961 Alumni Fund called on alumni to help "win the battle of education by contributing to the University."

Pennsylvania has lost a great number of younger people

Dedication Ceremonies Tomorrow

The ribbon-cutting ceremony and reception for the new Home Economics Building will be held at 9 a.m. tomorrow at the main entrance of the building.

The ceremony will open "Dedication Weekend" for the College of Home Economics.

The theme is "Families in the Next 50 Years" and a series of tours, special exhibits, movies, speeches and a colloquium will center around this idea.

Dr. David R. Mace, executive director of the American Association of Marriage Counselors, will give the keynote address at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

Speakers from several other colleges and universities will attend and participate in the program. They are Dr. Marjorie Knoll, Cornell University; Dr. Louise Fernandez, New York University; Dr. Pearl B. Swanson, Iowa State University.

Dr. Pauline Park Wilson Knapp, Merrill-Palmer Institute; Dr. Dorothy D. Scott, Ohio State University; Miss Eva L. Goble, Purdue University; Dr. Thelma Porter and Dr. Paul Miller, Michigan State University.

About 1000 or more high school students are also expected to attend the program.

Further information about any part of the program can be obtained inside the main entrance of Home Economics Building.

in the past two generations, many of whom migrated to other states in order to find employment, he said.

More young men and women with the education which can and must be provided at the University must be kept in the state, he said, because these are the people who will provide more jobs and better industries for the state in the years ahead.

Holtzinger said that alumni money can provide a more rounded type of education here to make it more attractive for those who are students now and those who will be students in years to come.

To date, $148,735 has been collected in this year's Alumni Fund from 7,051 contributors, according to Robert F. Beam, director of the Alumni Fund. He said the campaign will end in June.

This money is used to support various projects for which neither state nor federal funds are provided, Ross B. Lehman, assistant executive secretary of the Alumni Association, said. He added that only about 33 percent of the University's budget comes from state appropriations, which only covers the bare essentials.

Projects like scholarships, library acquisitions, furnishings in the Hetzel Union and the All-Faith Chapel, which contribute to the social, cultural and spiritual life of the student body must come from private gifts, he said.

In last year's campaign, he said, one out of every five alumni made contributions totaling more than $240,000, tenth highest among the nation's state institutions. When compared with universities having more than 10,000 alumni, the University stands fifth, he added.

The University graduated its first class and conferred the nation's first bachelor of scientific agricultural degrees on its 11 graduates 100 years ago — in December, 1861.

Segovia to Perform Tonight, Tomorrow

By BARB BROWN

Andres Segovia returns to the University after a three-year absence to perform tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 in Schwab.

Segovia, world famous Spanish guitarist, first played at Penn State on March 31, 1958. Because of the great demand for tickets at that time, he was invited to return this week.

No tickets remain for either of his performances. Both student and non-student tickets were sold out by Tuesday.

Segovia comes to the University on a tour of the United States and Canada, marking the 52nd anniversary of his first public appearance.

At the age of 14, Segovia made his debut in Granada. His appearance was described as a "revelation" and within a short time his name was known throughout Spain.

During his childhood he studied the piano, the violin and the cello but soon found the guitar the most pleasing and decided to make it his career.

Segovia is his own teacher and pupil. When he began playing the guitar, he was determined to make a place for it on the concert stage.

Evidence of his success and determination are the 70 concerts that he presented in 11 countries on a recent European tour.

In the past five seasons, Segovia established a new record at Manhattan's Town Hall by selling it out three times in three months.

"There is no guitar but the Spanish guitar and Andres Segovia is its prophet. I doubt if there lives a music lover with soul so dead that he could not find reward in attendance at a Segovia concert," said Virgil Thomson, critic of the New York Herald Tribune.

Parmi Nous Applications
