The three candidates for SGA president debated on WDFM last night for 45 minutes. Neal Friedman was the moderator.

In the debate, which was modeled on the Kennedy-Nixon debates of last fall, each candidate posed two questions — one

Deadline Extended On Loan Requests For First Term

The deadline for summer loan applications has been extended for a limited time, according to Ralph W. Kreckler, director of student aid.

"Students are encouraged to submit applications for the summer term right away," Kreckler said. There is $25,000 in aid available for students who want to attend the summer term, he added.

Fall, winter and spring loan applications should be submitted by June 1 so they can be processed and recipients notified during the summer, Kreckler said.

Loans are available from either University or National Defense Education Act funds. There is no interest on the National Defense Loans until after graduation, then interest will be two per cent for the first year, four per cent for the second year and six per cent for the succeeding years. University loans carry no interest until graduation and then a three per cent interest is levied.

The University could use twice the $300,000 it now issues in loans annually, Kreckler said. Limited to $250,000 by the National Defense Act, since July 1, 1960 the University has extended loans amounting to $260,664 to 583 students with the remaining funds coming from repayment of previous loans. This is an average of $447 per student.

Request for federal loan funds since last July numbered 1,143, he said, but only half of them could be granted. Another 216 students were given loans amounting to $41,000 from University funds.

The Ordnance Research Laboratory is one of three naval research laboratories in the United States which is operated under contract with major universities.

The United States has a total of about 13 research and development laboratories devoted to naval problems. Each center concentrates on one or more special areas of research.

At least four of the other NATO nations also have one or more such laboratories.

to each of the other candidates. A general discussion period followed each question.

Among the topics discussed were the BX Board of Control, SGA reorganization, a University Bookstore, and the National Student Association.

Robert Harrison, University party candidate, advocated that the University rejoin the National Student Association, an organization that Penn State withdrew from four years ago.

Duane Alexander, Independent party candidate, opposed this move and termed the NSA a "pink" and "leftist" group.

Dennis Foianini, Campus party candidate, answered a charge that he lacked experience in student government by claiming that such experience wasn't important and said it didn't amount to much anyhow.

He backed up his lack of participation in student politics by citing his double major and need to work to overcome "financial difficulties."

He promised a fresh approach to student government and said the president should be a strong leader.

He denied he was anti-fraternity, but did promise to bring more independents and not "status seekers" into student government.

Harrison promised to provide adequate leadership for SGA, something that he claims was lacking this year.

He questioned Foianini's lack of political experience and asked Alexander to explain the delay in his reorganization report.

Alexander defended his handling of SGA reorganization, saying that sorority rush forced the delay.

In answer to another charge that considerable publicity was associated with his position of re-

Showers Expected In Late Afternoon

Tropical air, which originated over the Gulf of Mexico, brought a touch of summer to this area yesterday.

This warm, moist air should remain in Pennsylvania today, and showers and thunderstorms are likely late this afternoon and tonight.

Today should be mostly cloudy with afternoon showers and thunderstorms. A high of 77 degrees is expected.

Showers and thunderstorms are seen for tonight and a low of 60 degrees is likely.

Tomorrow should be cloudy, breezy and cooler with a few sprinkles of rain.

Partly cloudy skies, windy and cooler weather are forecast for tomorrow night.

Reaction To Scholarships Increases

Response to the new program of Faculty Aide Scholarships has been "very promising," Ralph N. Kreckler, director of Student Aid, said yesterday.

The program was initiated by President Eric A. Walker to provide aid to outstanding students and at the same time to aid faculty members, Kreckler said.

Under the plan, 100 scholarships of $100 each are offered for the summer term. Students receiving these scholarships will aid faculty members in completing special research or classroom projects.

"A great number of inquiries have come in from faculty members who are interested in the program," Kreckler said. Student interest in the scholarships has picked up since the Easter vacation because more students started to think seriously about attending the summer term.

Any faculty member may submit a proposed project for which he would like student aid. He may also nominate a student for the project. Students interested in the program should contact their department heads, Kreckler said.

Kreckler said several types of research projects have already been submitted by faculty members. Professors desiring help in researching material for lectures, grading papers and other tasks also submitted requests. He added that several requests have also come in from professors desiring students from departments outside their own colleges.

Summer Positions Offered in Europe

College students may apply for summer jobs in Europe through the American Student Information Service. Jobs will be available in resorts, camps, hospitals, construction, on farms and in child care.

ASIS will also arrange inexpensive tours through parts of Europe for the students.

Interested students may write ASIS, Jahnstrasse 56-a, Frankfurt/Main, Germany for information.

Leonides to Disband, To Join ISA in Fall

After an hour's discussion, Leonides, independent women's association, voted last night to disband at the end of the spring semester and join ISA "in view of changing campus organizations."

Roberta Hill, past president and co-chairman of ISA, presented the motion because "community living is here to stay and if these activities (Leonides and ISA) stay apart they'll never get anywhere." The motion was passed with two abstentions.

The discussion centered mainly on the question of whether the ISA constitution should insure women representation on the 17-member ISA Board of Governors.

Leonides felt that ISA in the future might be dominated by men and that the women's voice would be lost.

Linda Eager, freshman in Liberal Arts from Lancaster, felt that the ISA constitution should specify that a certain ratio of women and men be elected to the board.

Another suggestion presented by Billie Carroll, junior in arts and letters from Philadelphia, was that the constitution state a minimum number of women that must be elected to the board.

Barry Rein, co-chairman of ISA, said he felt that the women were "downgrading themselves" to think that a substantial number of them would not be elected to the board.

If Leonides wants a minimum representation of women provided for in the ISA constitution, perhaps the men should do the same to make sure they have substantial representation, Rein said.

Marion Laines, advisor to Leonides and senior resident in McElwain, felt that there was no problem. If there were qualified women, she said, they would be elected to ISA.

Patricia Hagan, past treasurer, questioned whether president Patricia Shockey could ask for committee reports if officially there was no Leonides.

Schwartz Named 'Biz Ad' Editor

Robert Schwartz, junior in business administration from Merion, was appointed editor of the Biz Ad Bulletin by the College of Business Administration Student Council last week.

The council also decided to investigate joining the United States affiliate of the International Association of Students in Economics and Commerce. This organization sponsors a program in which upperclass and graduates in business and economics have the opportunity to train in business operations in foreign countries.
