

Pattee and Eng Libraries Donate 1,000 Publications

Nearly 1,000 engineering publications were recently given by the Pattee and Engineering Libraries to an army research library to aid it in rebuilding a collection destroyed by fire.

The Army Engineers Research Library at the Waterways Experiment Station in Vicksburg, Miss., destroyed last October, had one of the finest collections of engineering material in the United States.

At the request of Col. Edmund Lang, director of the station and former Penn State professor, a survey was made of the University collections and some 1,000 publications were selected and given to the destroyed library by the Pattee and Engineering libraries.

The destruction of the Army Engineers Research Library was a severe loss to the engineering profession and its former service can probably never be restored, Thomas L. Minder, engineering librarian, said. Many items, particularly the card catalogue, were irreplaceable, he said.

The catalogue contained some 270,000 cards which provided a complete index to all published information relating to waterways, hydraulics and soil mechanics. It was so valuable that plans had been suggested to have it microfilmed for use by universities and experiment stations throughout the world.

For rebuilding the library's collection, Lang has made requests to other university libraries and the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., for contributions, Minder said.

Though plans are being made to rebuild the library, it will take many years to bring the collection to its former completeness, Minder said.

Fortmann Talks On Ag Research At Faculty Club

By JOAN MEHAN

The salami, liverwurst, onion, cheese sandwich, affectionately called "SLOCS" was given a new significance at the Faculty Luncheon Club yesterday by Henry R. Fortmann, assistant director of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

Speaking on "Our Daily SLOCS and the A.E.S. System," Fortmann used SLOCS to represent food used in the research done by the Agricultural Experiment Station System. Continuing along this line, he jokingly suggested that TOCS, Thoughtful Observers of Contemporary Society, change their name to mean tomato, olive and cheese sandwich "since food is such a vital problem in our society."

"Every man, woman and child should be concerned about food production since their very survival may depend on it," he said.

Calling "Ag Hill" the upper reaches of campus, Fortmann said that his own Peace Corps mission is to "foster understanding of agricultural research in the central part of the campus. Too many see agricultural researchers as green-tinted fat men sitting on money bags holding $20 bills."

Agricultural experimenting is important because agriculture is the largest and most vital industry in the country, Fortmann explained. He said that the University has experimental stations in all but one county in the state.

These stations are under the supervision of professional staff members who regularly file progress reports with the agriculture department. Fortmann called these stations "singularly successful" but added that there is still a need for more research.

He concluded with what he called his daily prayer: "Give us this day our daily SLOCS and lead us not into starvation..."

Students Plan ROTC Protest At Ohio State

The Student Senate of the Ohio State University plans to sponsor and organize a student demonstration next month to protest compulsory ROTC, according to an article in the Ohio State Lantern.

The article stated that the action will be taken in response to a university decision to postpone the abolishment of the compulsory ROTC program until a statement on it is received from the Department of Defense.

Student leaders plan an orderly and completely controlled demonstration, the article said. Registration is scheduled for those wishing to participate. Name cards, buttons or arm bands will be issued to the participants for identification.

A student spokesman said that the purpose of the demonstration will be "to gain publicity and influence public opinion in favor of abolition of compulsory ROTC."

ISA to Hold Float Meeting

Students interested in working on the Independent Student Association's float for Spring Week should attend a work meeting at 7 p.m. today in 203 HUB. The ISA float will carry the Miss Penn State candidates and will not be entered in the competition.

Visiting German Prof

Dr. Horst B. Goehlich, of the University of Goettingen, Germany, is serving as visiting research associate in agricultural engineering.

Working under a NATO Research Fellowship, he is engaged in studies of the mechanical properties of fruits and vegetables as related to mechanical harvesting.

Dzvonik Hits Liberal Party's Election Plans

Michael Dzvonik, University party chairman, said yesterday that he hoped Liberal party would endorse an entire slate of officers from one political group, rather than split the endorsement between parties.

Dzvonik's comment came as a result of Liberal party's decision Sunday night to endorse Dennis Fojanini, Campus party candidate, for president; John Witmer, University party candidate for vice president; and Joan Cavanagh, University party candidate for secretary-treasurer.

"Most certainly it is the man himself who is chosen, but you must also consider what he stands for," Dzvonik said.

"I do not understand how you can choose a man from one party and then turn around and endorse two others with some conflicting ideas," he continued.

Dzvonik said that the University and Campus parties did not agree on all issues of the election, and therefore, he could not see how Liberal party could back candidates from both parties and have a beneficial endorsement.

LA Council Plans 'Frosh' Handbook

The Liberal Arts Student Council decided to look into the possibility of publishing a handbook for incoming freshmen in the College of the Liberal Arts at a meeting this week.

Other plans for Orientation Week and the counseling of new students also were discussed.

In other business, Morris Baker, vice president, announced that the council constitution will be revised to comply with the University four-term plan.

It was also announced that council members will attend a reception on May 18 to meet the college deans and department heads.

Dr. Robert W. Green, professor of history, will speak on "Louis XIV. The Pompous Innovator" at the May 9 lecture series, sponsored by the council.

Assembly to Meet--

Haber divided the Executive Committee last week into four subcommittees to study each branch of the constitution.

"Wednesday night I will ask each subcommittee to write its separate part of the Constitution and submit it to the Executive Committee within two weeks," Haber said.

Haber said he plans to call an Assembly meeting as soon as new officers are installed to approve the revised Constitution, but before submitting it to the Senate Committee on Student Affairs for final approval.

MISS LYNN HINEMAN of Alpha Phi

Gripes in the night...

Pray tell, whatever happened to "good taste"? Is it a hereditary characteristic lost through mutation from atomic explosions? Whatever it is, its lack is horribly evident on the local scene. With carefree abandon, pointed finger and painfully obvious evidence I accuse some of the ladies from the Phila. & N.Y.C. area of a total lack of discretion in their wearing apparel. Even in the studio mine weary eye has been insulted by observing female amazons wearing these ridiculous short skirts, exposing the most shapeless legs west of the Congo. Mind you, while some intriguing Parisian scamp wearing a costume of this nature would invite a second look (though she'd have enough common sense to select the occasion), a second look in the case of the above mentioned girl is pure sympathy. Think of your audience... if not, at least pity them. Not to mention flamboyant hairdos, excessive cosmetics, loudness vocally and the ubiquitous gum chewing. Before proceeding it might be best to exercise some restraint before we lose their trade altogether.

More gripes...

When a photographer loses his artistic integrity it happens while observing people making their proof selections. It stuns us to find that so often people select the worst proof—because it appeals to them. When will you realize that a portrait is meant for a recipient and not for keeping and thus the selection should be made by friends without you influencing their decisions—then hallelujah! Ah vanity—thou art a sorority girl (men are no different).

COLOR party pix of DPhiE, SPE and Phi Kappa Sig will be in our display case today.

Yes, we've again started photographing informal groups of men in color, after lunch at their fraternity. Call for information.

Will be starting fraternity composites next week. If you're happy with the routine composite you now have read no further but if a truly handsome job would appeal to you (in time for early Fall delivery) then do besiege us. Will the Phi Gams and Thetas send a representative down tomorrow.

My Vespa motor scooter is up for sale... Great shape, great price.
