

Bookstore Among Topics Discussed by Candidates During Press Conference

By ROCHELLE MICHAELS and DAVE RUNKEL

Opposing views on a student bookstore, discrimination, and a march on Harrisburg were aired by the eight candidates for student government offices and senior class president at last night's Daily Collegian Press Conference.

When asked to comment on a proposal by Dennis Foianini,

Campus party candidate for student body president, for a "little bookstore" which would grow in future years, Robert Harrison, University party candidate for student body president, said "if we get the go-ahead, we might as well go about it in a big way."

However, Duane Alexander, independent candidate for student body president, said that because of space and money restraints we should start the project on a "limited basis."

One of the new topics which came up for discussion was a student government policy on discrimination in campus organizations.

Harrison said that he did not feel that SGA could make fraternities and sororities strike discriminatory clauses from their charters, but could state its disapproval of the discrimination.

Foianini said that student government should take a stand against discrimination because it is against the "law of the land." However, he said he did not feel that an organization should be forced to admit someone just to prove themselves non-discriminatory.

It is up to each group to take its own stand on the matter, but SGA should voice its disapproval, Alexander said.

The candidates had different ideas on supporting a car caravan to Harrisburg to "back the Penn State budget."

Alexander said that the caravan would not accomplish its purpose and that the legislators might react in the opposite way from our wishes.

"After the Penn State Glee Club sang a 'back the budget' song to the legislature last week, any other attempt to get our appropriation could look ridiculous," Foianini answered.

Harrison said he felt that there was nothing basically wrong with the idea as long as it would be a peaceful demonstration.

Judges Announced For Float Parade

Seven faculty members and one State College resident will judge the Spring Week Float Parade which is scheduled for 6 p.m. tomorrow, Judy Cheadle, co-chairman of the parade, announced yesterday.

The judges are: Lawrence J. Perez, assistant dean of engineering and architecture; George Pappas, assistant professor of art education; Edward Mattil, associate professor of art education; Laurence H. Lattman, assistant professor of geomorphology; Stanley I. Kutler, instructor of history.

James W. Beach, instructor of music; Robert Stewart, professor of art; Eleanor Rubin, interior decorator in State College.

The judges will be on one judging stand near the corner of College Avenue and S. Allen Street, at the end of the Mall.

Floats will be judged on the following point system: (1) 100 points (maximum) for originality and imagination, (2) 50 points for adherence to theme and (3) 100 points for workmanship. The float in each category with the largest number of points will be the winner for that category.

Nine trophies will be awarded for the parade — first, second and third place in each of the three categories.

The winning float in each category will get 30 points toward the group's overall Spring Week total. Second will merit 20 points and third, 10 points.

The parade will be televised in periodic news flashes over WGAL-TV, Channel 8, Lancaster. A representative from the station will take moving pictures during the parade.

In case of rain the parade will be held at 2:30 p.m. Saturday. Any changes in the parade will be announced on WMAJ.

The main route of the parade will be along Pollock Road, from Burrows Road to Entrance Road. The bicycle stands and blocks, normally in the middle of Pollock Road near Schwab, will be removed tomorrow night for the parade.

Insurrection Leader Prisoned in France

ALGIERS (P)—The leader of the four-day Algerian army insurrection was clapped into a French prison yesterday and his lieutenants fled into hiding as President Charles de Gaulle reasserted his rule over Algeria.

Gen. Maurice Challe, retired air force officer and leader of the insurrection, flew to Paris and surrendered. He was taken to prison in the capital to await trial and, possibly, a death sentence.

Challe's top aides, Gens. Raoul Salan, Edmond Jouhad and Andre Zeller, were believed hiding outside Algiers.

Troops were ordered to bring them and three colonels before a special military court on charges of organizing insurrection and usurping power.

De Gaulle has not yet disclosed whether Challe, stripped of his rank before he surrendered, will be tried as a soldier or as a civilian.

On this issue could depend whether the 55-year-old officer faces a firing squad or the guillotine if convicted. The possibility of a death sentence was largely discounted in Paris, however.

De Gaulle moved quickly to fill the vacuum created in Algeria after the revolt collapsed. Louis Joxe, French minister for Algerian affairs, and Gen. Jean Olie arrived by plane from Paris to take control.

They met immediately with De Gaulle's civilian administrator, Jean Morin, who a few hours earlier had been a prisoner of the insurgents.

In Paris, Premier Michel Debre warned Frenchmen that the insurrection in Algeria might force the government to impose greater discipline on the nation.

In a nationwide television and radio speech, Debre said the military opposition might strike again.

Why Challe surrendered instead of fleeing into political exile was an unanswered question. Some observers speculated he is simply man enough to take his medicine now that he has lost. Others felt he wants to make propaganda at a trial.

Bernreuter Disapproves Of 'March'

Robert G. Bernreuter, special assistant to the president for student affairs, said yesterday that he feels that a student march on Harrisburg would do more harm than good.

In opposition of Bernreuter's idea, Rigoberto Juarez-Paz, assistant professor of philosophy, said he is in favor of a student march on the capitol and that he was willing to march with the students if they go.

Bernreuter said that he thinks "a few girls going down there would be considered a lark by legislators, rather than a serious attempt to influence legislation."

"If students want guidance on how to favorably influence legislation on the University's proposed budget they should talk to the people who are highly in favor of it — the congressmen for this district. Then they should follow this advice," Bernreuter said.

On the other hand, Juarez-Paz said that he feels that a student march on the capitol might dramatize the needs of the University. "I think it would be more effective than asking the students to write their congressmen," he said.

"It should be of equal interest to the faculty that the budget request be approved," Juarez-Paz said.

Queens, He-Men Face Competition

Five finalists for the He-Man title and five for Queen of Hearts will be chosen today in the preliminary contests.

Competition for Queen of Hearts will begin at 3 p.m. in White Hall. Events will include basketball foul shooting, volleyball serves, bowling and swimming.

The He-Man preliminaries will be held at 6 p.m. at Old Beaver Field.

Concert to Feature Schuman as Soloist

Oboist Henry Schuman will appear with the University Orchestra, directed by Theodore A. Karhan, associate professor of music, in an Artists Series concert at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in Schwab.

Student tickets will be available at the Hetzel Union desk from 1:30 to 5 p.m. tomorrow and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Non-student tickets will go on sale Saturday at $1.25 each.

Schuman will be accompanied by the string-orchestra in the Vivaldi "Concerto for Oboe and Strings," and Mozart's "Divertimento for Oboe, Horn, and Strings."

The full orchestra will play a "Prelude and Fugue" by Handel, and the "Lieutenant Kije Suite" by Prokofiev.

Schuman, who has just returned from the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico, has toured extensively in Europe as soloist and principal oboe of the Piccola Accademia Musicale, an Italian Chamber orchestra. He later toured under the auspices of the U.S. Army as first oboist and assistant conductor of a symphony orchestra.

Schuman has conducted for films, is musical consultant to Brandon Films, and is conductor of an amateur orchestra in Manhattan. He has also presented concerts in Germany.

The oboist is a member of the Symphony of the Air and has performed and recorded with both this group and the Columbia and RCA-Victor Symphonies.

The Vivaldi Concerto is one of a series of string-orchestra works with various solos, including bassoon, and mandolin. The orchestra will include a harpsicord for presentation of this work.

Handel's Prelude and Fugue was originally written for the pipe

SGA Rule Explained By Sloane

James Sloane, president of the freshman class, said last night he believed that when Dean Wharton, sophomore class president commented that he would like to see elections for class presidents in the spring he must have been under the impression that class presidents would not be included in the Student Government Association.

After a meeting with the subcommittee of the SGA reorganization committee, it was agreed that class presidents should be on SGA, Sloane said.

Sloane said that the freshman class advisory board voiced disapproval of spring elections for a class president.

"I think one reason for the advisory board's dissension is that we're in the midst of many big things, such as the selection of a queen and class night," Sloane said.

Since the revised SGA constitution will not be presented for another two weeks it will be too late
