

220 Apply For Study Overseas

Two hundred and twenty students have submitted provisional applications for the Study Abroad Program sponsored by the College of Liberal Arts, Dr. Dagobert de Levie, director of the program, said yesterday.

The official deadline for applications was May 1, but de Levie said that an attempt will be made to process and evaluate any late applications.

The program is divided into two plans, an elective study for those who wish to spend one term as registered Penn State students at a foreign university, and a specialized study for those who want to take a leave of absence from the University to study abroad.

De Levie announced that over 200 of the applicants requested the elective study program.

The applications that we already received are being processed by the Liberal Arts committee on study abroad," de Levie said. "The committee will attempt to consider those not accommodated in the 1962 program again in 1963," he said.

"It is hoped that announcements will be made soon regarding the country or countries in which the program will be established for the 1962 term," he said.

"About 50 per cent of the applicants have above a 3.0 All-University average," de Levie said. "Although a high average is a major determining factor in the selection of program participants, it will not necessarily exclude members with a lower average," he said.

De Levie said that he may be reached in his office, 4 Sparks, to answer questions about the program.
