

Senator Appointed To Study Education

By CAROL KUNKLEMAN

Sen. Jo Hays, D-Centre, was appointed Wednesday to a special bi-partisan Senate committee to initiate legislation on the recommendations of Gov. David L. Lawrence's special Study Committee on Education.

The House has already approved a similar group known as the Select Committee to study the recommendations of the education report.

The Senate, in approving the appointment of its committee, stipulated that the two groups should meet jointly to discuss possible legislation.

Just two weeks ago the Senate voted against forming such a committee. A majority vote was required to set up the committee.

The Associated Press reported that Republicans in both houses objected to the bi-partisan committee idea. The AP reports said Republicans contended that the Lawrence administration wanted to take the responsibility off its shoulders for action on the recommendations of the governor's study committee.

Hays had proposed the bi-partisan committee two weeks ago. He argued that a bi-partisan group could iron out differences in opinion and thus get legislation passed more quickly. The Senate defeated Hays' original proposal. The new proposal on the same idea was passed by a 22-18 vote.

The new six-member committee includes two members besides Hays who were also members of Lawrence's special study committee. This group was appointed by the governor in April, 1960, to

ROTC Teams Will Compete In Drill Meet

The Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC drill teams are scheduled to compete in the Milton S. Eisenhower Drill meet at 2 p.m. Sunday in Beaver Stadium.

In the event of rain, the competition will be held in the Ice Skating Pavilion.

The three teams will compete in two contests, standard and trick drill. A trophy will be presented to the winner of each contest and the Milton S. Eisenhower trophy will be presented to the team with the highest total points in both parts of the contest.

Last year the Air Force Team won the trophy.

Charles J. Smith, vice-chairman of the University Senate Committee on Military Instruction, will serve as the honorary judge for the meet. Other judges will be active officers of the three services.

The meet is named for Milton Eisenhower, former president of the University. It is the only intra-university competition held for the drill teams, although each of them participates in several off-campus competitions each year.

Coeds to Be Allowed In Men's Halls

Women will be permitted to go through men's residence halls from 1 to 4 p.m. on Mother's Day, the Men's Residence Council ruled Wednesday night.

Under a former regulation, coeds were not permitted in the private living areas of men's residence halls at any time.

George Henning, president of MRC, said when he proposed the bill that since men are allowed in the women's residence halls on Mother's Day, coeds should be permitted in the men's residence halls.

This would be a "mutual trade agreement," Henning said.

The council, a coordinating body for the men's area councils, also set up minimum quiet hours for all men's residence halls during the final examination period. The new ruling calls for quiet hours to be observed from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily.

The council suggested that the individual men's residence units extend the quiet period to 24 hours a day.

The council also passed a bill allowing men to wear bermudas to dinner during the final examination period. However, men will still be required to wear slacks at the Sunday noon meal.

In other business, the council decided to prepare a booklet for incoming freshmen, which would contain residence hall regulations as well as dress and dating customs.

study the state's education system and make recommendations for long improvements.

In April of this year, the governor's committee made its report to Lawrence. Bills to implement the committee's recommendations must be introduced before any legislative action can be taken on the report.

Any such bills would then be submitted to committee for further study.

Last week Hays, who is also chairman of the Senate Education Committee, and three other sponsors introduced the first two bills implementing recommendations of Lawrence's study committee.

The first bill puts a limit on school construction and boosts the construction limit per pupil. The second bill sets up a statewide system of college scholarships.

Hays said last night that actually a total of five bills on the study committee's recommendations have been introduced by him and the three other sponsors, but that the first two bills are the only ones which have been placed on the Senate calendar for action.

These two bills have been submitted to the Senate Education Committee, he said.

Cans Show Size Of Food Handling

By DAVE RUNKEL

If Food Services stacked the green bean, tomato and corn cans used in the past year, there would be 17 stacks of cans the height of the Empire State Building, Robert C. Proffitt, head of Food Services said yesterday.

The University's Food Services Department is probably the largest of any university in the United States, Proffitt said.

He said that he did not have specific figures, but said he knows from personal experience that none of the Big Ten schools had a Food Services Department as large as the one on campus.

A total of 8,200 students eat in Food Services-operated dining halls every day, Proffitt said.

The department employs 400 people on a full-time basis and has 500 to 700 students working part time for meals or pay, he said. Food Services also provides full-time employment for 6,800 hens, Proffitt added. This is the number of hens needed to provide enough eggs for Food Services' use. Many of the eggs are used by the bakery department.

The bread baked in one year by the University bakery would extend across Pennsylvania to New Jersey if the loaves were laid end to end, Proffitt said.

Food Services, in attempting to work within its budget and avoid cutting down on the amount of food served to each student, has centralized its baking department, eliminated the need for bus boys in most dining halls and limited the number of food choices offered to the students, Proffitt said.

Having students return their own dishes has eliminated many jobs, Proffitt said, since students are no longer needed to clear the tables. Bus boys are employed only in Atherton, McElwain and Simmons.
