Paula Wiggins Wins Centre County Title

Paula Wiggins, junior in arts and letters from Lancaster, was crowned Miss Centre County of 1962 last night against a Hawaiian setting of palm trees, bamboo and tropical flowers.

The new Miss Centre County was crowned by Linda Lane, Miss Centre County 1961, a former University student,

Much Warmer Weather Due Today, Tonight

To make a good impression on visiting parents, the weather pattern is expected to undergo a major change today.

Afternoon temperatures, aided by abundant sunshine, are expected to climb nearly 20 degrees above those of yesterday. A high of 82 is expected.

But the weather isn't expected to be perfect. It has a tradition to uphold: some precipitation has fallen in the Nittany Valley for the past 22 weekends, and even Mother's Day can't stand in the way of a record like that. So, a shower or thunderstorm will probably develop this afternoon, although it is expected to be brief.

Another summer-like day is predicted for tomorrow, but again a possibility exists for a brief shower in the afternoon. A high temperature of 84 degrees is expected tomorrow.

Tonight should be partly cloudy and mild with a low of 65 likely.

Haber Commends Kennedy on Corps

Richard Haber, out-going president of SGA, has sent a letter to President John F. Kennedy commending him for establishing the Peace Corps.

In the letter Haber said that the University Senate, administration and SGA have been searching for a workable substitute for the compulsory Reserve Officer's Training Program, but have had no results.

"The very term compulsory seems to be contrary to the philosophy of education; but under the 'Land Grant Act,' Penn State is required to provide military training," Haber said.

Foianini Appoints Williams to Head SGA Encampment

By ROCHELLE MICHAELS
Nancy Williams, junior in secondary education from Drexel Hill, was appointed SGA Encampment chairman yesterday by Dennis Foianini, SGA president.

The appointment is subject to the approval of Assembly, which meets tomorrow night.

Foianini, in listing his reasons for choosing Miss Williams, said, "she is a very strong and capable person as she has proven by her actions on Assembly."

He also said that he and Miss Williams are working on "very concrete suggestions" to present to Assembly tomorrow night.

Miss Williams was confident that she could do the job.

This is the second appointment made this week to the position of Encampment chairman.

Thursday night Richard Haber, outgoing president of SGA, named Robert Fry, president of Town Independent Men, to the post. At the same time Haber chose John Witmer, SGA president pro-tempore, as Encampment business manager.

However, Ralph Friedman, C-Soph., objected to Haber's action saying the new president should have the power to appoint people he will have to work with.

Haber and Foianini then agreed to delay announcement of Encampment chairman and business manager until yesterday.

Foianini said last night that he will not name the business manager till a later time.

Michael Dzvovnik, chairman of University party, declined to comment. He said his reason for declining comment was that Miss Williams is the former vice chairman of his party.

Dennis Eisman, Campus party chairman, expressed his approval of the appointment saying he thought Miss Williams is an excellent worker and a capable girl.

He added that it was only fair that Foianini should make the appointment because the Encampment chairman must work closely with the student government president.

Speaking for Liberal party, Al Sharp, party vice chairman, said that the party supports Foianini's "excellent choice of Nancy Williams as Encampment chairman."

Police Drop Plans to Act On Protest

By JOAN MEHAN
It is highly unlikely that any police action will be taken against the small group of students who protested against the national Civil Defense drill 15 days ago, State College Police Chief John R. Juba said yesterday.

State College Burgess Roy D. Anthony said, however, that the protest is still being investigated by the state Civil Defense director and it has not yet been decided whether other action will be taken.

The offices of the dean of men and the dean of women are also investigating the demonstration and have not as yet decided on a definite course of action.

The case began when a group of 6 to 12 students protested against a Civil Defense alert in town by remaining "in the open" during the nationwide drill.

The protesters marched up and down the southeast corner of College Ave. and S. Allen St. during the 10 minute drill. They distributed leaflets which stated that "the only defense against war is peace" and called the drill a "flagrant deception played upon the American people."

At the time of the demonstration no action was taken by either the borough or the University.

The case was taken to the state Civil Defense director to determine whether the protesters had violated any law, Juba said. But, he added that the state has not yet directed him to take any action.

He explained that each state has the privilege of setting up its own Civil Defense laws since conditions vary from state to state. He said he did not know of any federal law concerning (Continued on page eight) said that the government of Tanganyika has requested 25 surveyors, 4 geologists and 4 civil engineers to develop major roads in that country.

"It has been estimated that the development of roads in Tanganyika could add as much as 30 per cent to that country's national output," she said.

The surveyors will be selected by July 1, go into training by July 10 and leave for Africa in September, Miss Bowles said. They will receive training in the Swahili language "on the spot" in Africa, she added.

Miss Bowles said that future projects will probably be selected in the same way — a nation will ask for aid in a specific area, Peace Corps officials will investigate and approve the project, and volunteers will be selected to suit the request.

In describing the selection process for volunteers, Miss Bowles emphasized that the Peace Corps is not exclusively for young people, "Almost half of the volunteers are over 35," she said.

The selection process begins when a volunteer fills out an application, Miss Bowles said. Aptitude tests will weed out some volunteers and further tests will eliminate more.

Volunteers who survive the testing will receive about three months training at centers which approximate the living conditions of their destinations. Selection will continue throughout the training period, she said.

Miss Bowles said that the greatest need of the Peace Corps will probably be for highly skilled volunteers. She said the biggest demand seems to be for teachers, Agriculture extension experts, engineers, nurses and doctors and nutrition and sanitation experts will also be needed, she said.

In commenting on the role of women in the Peace Corps, Miss Bowles said that it is "less likely" women will be asked to serve alone in villages.

"Women will probably work in cities where the female in an active role is more generally accepted," she said.

The daughter of Chester A. Bowles, undersecretary of State, Miss Bowles is executive assistant to Lawrence E. Dennis, who is on leave from the University as acting associate director for Peace Corps volunteers and also in charge of the training program.

Rusk Will Meet Gromyko on Laos

GENEVA (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk decided early today to meet Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko face to face to see if they could solve the issue of who should speak for the Laotian people at the East-West conference in Laos.

Wrangling over the Soviet Union's insistence that the pro-Communist Pathet Lao be given full status as a government at the conference table prevented the 14-nation meeting from getting under way yesterday as planned.

There were suggestions among the big Western delegations that perhaps it would be better not to hold the conference at all.

Rusk's decision to meet Gromyko became known following a dinner party arranged by Lord

Home, British foreign secretary. The Rusk-Gromyko meeting is expected to take place this morning.

The outcome may determine whether the conference, called according to both sides to seek means of making Laos a peaceful and neutral nation, eventually gets started or not.

Rusk has firmly rejected the seating of the Pathet Lao faction with full governmental status. Not even the Soviet Union has recognized it as a government but wants it seated with equality with the pro-Western government of Premier Prince Boun Oum.

Fighting to keep the Communist camp from winning a strategic edge in the jump-off stage at the bargaining table, Rusk advanced two firm demands that prevented the conference from opening yesterday as scheduled.

First, Rusk insisted there could be no conference unless there was certification from the three-nation International Control Commission in Laos that an actual cease-fire existed. He was satisfied on that point by a report from the Indian-Canadian-Polish commission.

Second, Rusk refused to agree that the pro-Communist Pathet Lao could be seated at the conference as though it were a government of Laos, as the Soviets demanded. He said the Pathet Lao could not claim full governmental status with the same standing as Premier Boun Oum's pro-Western regime.

It was on this point that efforts to open the conference broke down.

There will be a meeting of The Collegian news staff Monday at 5:15 p.m. Attendance is compulsory.
