

LA Series To Present Oxford Prof

By DEE DEE RABE
Robert Graves, professor of poetry at Oxford University, will present selected readings from his poetry at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in Schwab.

The lecture will be the last in a series sponsored by the Liberal Arts Student Council.

Graves is noted not only as a poet, but also as a critic, novelist and historian. His works include: "Collected Poems 1914-1917," "Poems and Satires" (1951), "Poems" (1953), and "Crowning Privilege" (1955).

Graves was born in London in 1895 and attended Charter house and St. John's College, Oxford. He served as a captain in the British infantry during World War I. After the war, he became a professor of English literature at Egyptian University in Cairo.

Allen Tate, American poet and critic has commented, "Mr. Graves made his name as a poet during the war of 1914. He wrote straight-forward lyrics adorned with a touch of homely, folktale fantasy."

According to Tate, "Graves developed an intellectual strain in his work and 'stripped' his style to evolve a new sort of manner." Tate explains that it is more difficult to write in this manner, but the effect is more subtle because it is concentrated and ironical.

"Graves is one of the strongest and most individual poets now writing, and, like Yeats, manages to bridge the gulf between the old poetry and the new while remaining true to his own inspiration," Tate said.

Spring Classes Will Terminate Noon, May 27

Spring semester classes will end at noon Saturday, May 27 instead of Thursday, May 25 as previously announced in the calendars distributed at the Fall registration. John E. Miller, University scheduling officer, said yesterday.

Miller said that there has been some confusion about the schedule because of the different dates announced for the finish of the semester's classes. He said that the University Senate changed the date after the student calendars had been printed.

Howard A. Cutler, acting vice president for academic affairs, said that the date was probably changed to give an equal number of hours for every class.

Cutler said that all the deans of the various colleges were told of the change, but that perhaps the instructors were not notified.

He said that there would be no free day before final examinations this semester, and that examinations would start on Monday, May 29.

Miller said that the corrected date was printed in the Spring semester timetable.

Army Drill Team Wins Competition

By KEN KASTLE
The Army ROTC Drill Team won the Milton S. Eisenhower Drill Meet Sunday before a crowd of 7,000 in Beaver Stadium. The trophy, presented by President Eric A. Walker, will be retired by the team.

The meet, the only intra-service competition on campus, was divided into two phases, standard and-trick drill. A trophy was presented to the winner of each phase and the Eisenhower Trophy was presented to the Army team for receiving the highest total points.

The Army team, all Pershing Rifle's members, captured first place in trick drill and second place in standard drill, gaining them a total of 497.20 points out of a possible 600. Cadet Brigadier Gordon N. Zelez commanded the team.

The Navy standard drill team captured first place and the trick team placed second to give Navy second place in the overall competition with a total of 493.77 points. Midshipman 2/c George R. Sterner commanded the team.

Both Air Force teams placed third to give the team third place in the final standings. They received a total of 455.65 points. Cadet Colonel John H. Cheatham, III, commanded the team.

The Army trick team added a bit of the unusual to the scene when it appeared in Scottish kilts. Cadet Capt. Francis A. O'Brochta, commander of the team, said that this attire had no particular significance.

"It was just to add color to the team," he said.

O'Brochta added that this is the first year the team has worn kilts. They used them at a drill meet at Indiantown Gap earlier this year.

MRS. CHARLES HERLOCHER

Let it not be said that a married women never made this column. Until five weeks ago the young lady above was Miss Gladys Fox of Delta Phi Epsilon.

If the above reproduction is any better than the mess in last week's column, you'll note as we did, a resemblance to Sophia Loren.

While we can't guarantee the new bride will be waiting on you at her husband's (a former SAE) Bar-B-Que, as she is still a student, it's worth a try.

Though the new Kappa Sigma house can hardly be construed as being remarkably handsome on the exterior, the interior, especially the lounge, is breathtaking in its size. Well worth seeing.

Effective today and until Thursday there will be a HALF PRICE SALE on all extra copies of party pictures be they in black & white or color. Extra copies of pictures taken on Senior Ball weekend will be available this Friday and Saturday at regular prices. Concerning parties shot in color on that weekend -- there are three extra copies of each party available now.

Which reminds us since we'll be doing the XO pledge class in color in their suite, if you're thinking of the same, you'd best hurry.

The photographer's quandry -- should we render you as you really appear -- or as you would like to be? For us, the quandry ends in 415 hours from now when we land in Madrid and use the camera to record reality in both its beautiful and often pathetic form.
