

JFK Administration Had Good Start-Aspaturian

By JOANNE MARK

(This is the third of a series of articles examining the views of political science faculty members concerning the first 100 days of the Kennedy administration.)

The Kennedy Administration got off to a very promising start in its first 100 days, Vernon W. Aspaturian, associate professor of political science, said yesterday.

The new administration made substantial gains in domestic policy, especially in the field of civil rights, he said. "Civil

Carpenter Calls Co-op Telecasts 'Clear Success'

The University's cooperative broadcasting arrangement with commercial television was termed both "satisfactory and successful" by C. R. Carpenter, director of the Division of Academic Research and Services.

Carpenter said the University's alliance with WFBG-TV, Altoona, during the past three and one-half years has clearly demonstrated the practicability of cooperative broadcasting. The station is owned by Triangle Publications.

The University, in October 1957, joined WFBG-TV in a five-year cooperative arrangement designed to furnish the Altoona station a minimum of three hours of educational programming weekly.

The same year a studio was established at the University and linked with WFBG-TV by microwave.

Triangle Publications gives the University $10,000 yearly to support programs originating from the campus.

Carpenter said the cooperative arrangement with WFBG-TV is good. "No other broadcasting outlet is available to the University in this area," he added.

He explained that the University has applied to the Federal Communications Commission for television channel 3.

Neuber Discusses Special Child Needs

By JOAN MEHAN

The special child can become an integral part of society when he is developed to his potential, Margaret A. Neuber, professor of education said.

"We have advanced in our understanding of the special child who was thought of at one time as a deviant from the normal," she said.

Today special educators are beginning to see the child not as a deviant but as representative of a variation in human growth and development, Miss Neuber added.

"The special child shows his individuality through variation," and "it is the job of the special education teacher to bring out his individuality," she said.

The program of special education began at the University in 1945 with an enrollment of one student. At present there are about 50 undergraduates, 75 master's candidates and 30 doctoral candidates in the program.

The program was started to prepare teachers for mentally retarded and mentally gifted children, Miss Neuber said.

Since special education takes care of those children who cannot profit by regular education the teaching requirements are taken from many different fields of study, Miss Neuber said.

Some of the requirements for elementary education overlap the ones for special education so it is not difficult to become certified in two fields, Miss Neuber said.

She explained that special education can be entered at any time since there is such an overlapping of course requirements. She added, however, that the bulk of entrants are juniors.

Assembly To Sponsor Fall Tutors

A tutoring service, sponsored by the Student Government Association, will go into operation for the fall term if approved by the Assembly, Ruth Falk, chairman of the SGA Tutoring Service Committee, said last night.

This service, now in its preliminary stages, "is an attempt to make good tutors available for students," Miss Falk said. The committee also hopes, Miss Falk said, that the students will become aware of the service through a proposed publicity service.

Under the proposed service, circulars would be distributed to students during registration. During the first week of each term, booths would be set up in the basement of the Hetzel Union Building to enable those interested in being tutors to register, Miss Falk said.

Anyone wishing to act as a tutor must have obtained an A or B in the course which he would be tutoring, Miss Falk said.

The lists of tutors would be compiled during the second week of the term, Miss Falk said, and given to the coordinators of the living areas for distribution during the third week.

Compiled alphabetically, the lists would be arranged according to main subject fields, Miss Falk said. The name, address and telephone number of the tutor would be included as well as some information concerning his qualifications.

Students wishing to make use of the service, by obtaining a tutor, Miss Falk said, may contact any person on the list. All arrangements as to time, place and fees for tutoring will be made between the tutor and the student seeking the assistance.

Several honorary groups are considering participating in the SGA Tutoring Service as one of their projects for the coming year, Miss Falk said.

The plans for the service will be presented Thursday to the SGA Assembly for approval, Miss Falk said.

Glass Work Continues

Basic research in the surface structure of glass is being pursued by Dr. W. A. Weyl, Evan Pugh Research Professor of Physical Sciences in the College of Mineral Industries, under grants from the Glass Container Industry Research Corporation, of New Castle, Pa.

The current one-year grant is for $25,000 and the project is in its third year.

Five O'Clock Theatre To Present Play Today

Five O'Clock Theatre will present "Mrs. Que vs. The Navy" by Margaret S. Van Duyn, senior in arts from Bellefonte, this evening in the Little Theater in the basement of Old Main.

Directed by George Cubbler, junior in recreation education from Phoenixville, the play is the story of a wife's personal revolt against the Navy.

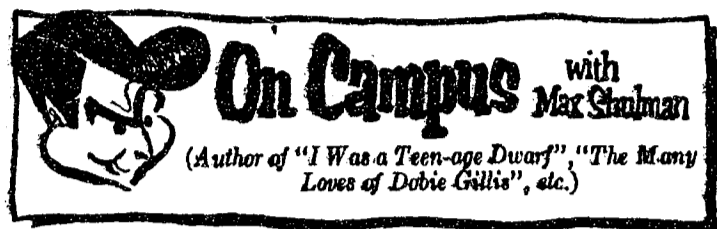

Penn State's doors were first opened to women students in 1871.

Corps--

(Continued from page one) versity curriculum until next fall. If changes are made, he said, they will probably include a broader area than the Peace Corps program.

"This is just a small segment of the committee's study," Murray said.

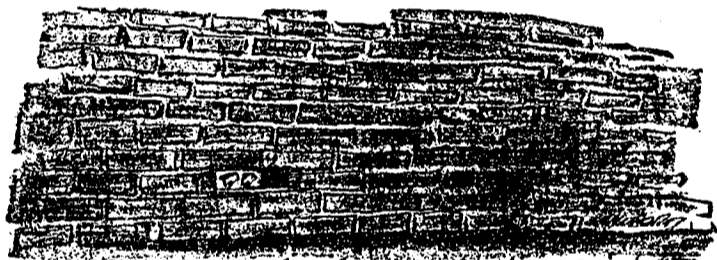

He explained that the committee felt the Peace Corps program is transient. It has been initiated by a new political administration and could change with a change in politics, he said.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

Seven years now I have been writing this column for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, and each year when I come to the last column of the year, my heart is gripped by the same bittersweet feeling. I shall miss you sorely, dear readers, in the long summer days ahead. I shall miss all you freckle-faced boys with frogs in your pockets. I shall miss all you pig-tailed girls with your gap-toothed giggles. I shall miss you one and all—your shining morning faces, your apples, your marbles, your jacks, your little oilcloth satchels.

But I shall not be entirely sad, for you have given me many a happy memory to sustain me. It has been a rare pleasure writing this column for you all year, and I would ask every one of you to come visit me during the summer except there is no access to my room. The makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, after I missed several deadlines, walled me in. All I have is a mail slot into which I drop my columns and through which they supply me with Marlboro Cigarettes and such food as will slip through a mail slot. (For six months now I have been living on after-dinner mints.)

For six months now I have been living on after-dinner mints

I am only having my little joke. The makers of Marlboros have not walled me in. They could never do such a cruel thing. Manly and muscular they may be, and gruff and curt and direct, but underneath they are men of great heart and sweet, compassionate disposition, and I wish to take this opportunity to state publicly that I will always have the highest regard for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, no matter how my lawsuit for back wages comes out.

I am only having my little joke. I am not suing the makers of Marlboros for back wages. These honorable gentlemen have always paid me promptly and in full. To be sure, they have not paid me in cash, but they have given me something far more precious. You would go far to find one so covered with tattoos as I.

I am only having my little joke. The makers of Marlboros have not covered me with tattoos. In fact, they have engraved no commercial advertising whatsoever on my person. My suit, of course, is another matter, but even here they have exercised taste and restraint. On the back of my suit, in unobtrusive neon, they have put this fetching little jingle:

Are your taste buds out of kilter?
Are you bored with smoking, neighbor?
Then try that splendid Marlboro filter,
Try that excellent Marlboro feighbor!

On the front of my suit, in muted phosphorus, are pictures of the members of the Marlboro board and their families. On my hat is a small cigarette girl crying, "Who'll buy my Marlboros?"

I am only having my little joke. The makers of Marlboros have been perfect dolls to work for, and so, dear readers, have you. Your kind response to my nonsense has warmed this old thorax, and I trust you will not find me soggy if in this final column of the year, I express my sincere gratitude.

Have a good summer. Stay healthy. Stay happy. Stay loose.

The makers of Marlboros and the new unfiltered king-size Philip Morris Commander have been happy to bring you this uncensored, free-wheeling column all year long. Now, if we may echo old Max: Stay healthy. Stay happy. Stay loose.
