Summer Fees Must Be Paid Before June 13

Summer term fees must be paid before registration this year, Richard H. Baker, bursar, said yesterday. This is the first time that summer fees must be paid before registration, he explained.

Summer term registration is scheduled to begin on Tuesday, June 13, and end at noon June 14. The summer term is scheduled to begin on June 15.

Baker said that since the summer term is part of the regular academic year under the new four-term system, standard University procedure of paying fees before registration would be followed.

Students who wish deferments on their summer tuition should submit an application to the bursar immediately, Baker said. Applications must be signed by the student's parents. The applications are available at the Bursar's Office in the basement of Willard.

The Bursar's Office will be open from 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturdays June 3 and 10, Baker said. He said that these additional hours were set up to enable students to get deposit refunds on Saturdays.

Societies Plan Concert

Mu Phi Epsilon, women's music honorary society, and Phi Mu Alpha, men's music honorary society, will sponsor a joint concert at 4:15 p.m. today in 117 Carnegie. The concert will be open to the public.

Haffner said that students may meet with their advisers now to get approval of their schedules and to complete registration forms. Students should meet with their advisers at least 24 hours before registration, he said.

Advisers will not be in Recreation Hall during the registration period as they have been in past summers, Haffner said. This summer, advisers will be available in their offices, he said.

Haffner said that in order to be admitted to registration a student needs to present a valid identification card, a bursar's receipt for tuition and other charges and an official registration form (card number 2) signed by his faculty adviser.

Each student must register for himself, Haffner said. He added that registration for part-time courses beginning on a date other than June 15 may be completed on the day the course begins without payment of the usual $10 late registration charge.

Budget Prospects Remain Undecided

By CAROL KUNKLEMAN

The prospects for a vote on the University's $18.5 million budget now by the state legislature are still undetermined. Sen. Jo Hays, D-Centre, said last night.

Hays said no new action on any appropriations was taken when the legislature reconvened yesterday after a week's recess for primary elections.

A few weeks ago Hays said that budget appropriations for institutions such as schools and hospitals in the state were considered non-preferred legislation.

Because of this classification, this legislation is traditionally considered last on the Assembly's agenda. Hays said he didn't expect any vote to be taken until a week before the Assembly's adjournment which he estimated would be about the second week in July.

The bill for the University's $18.5 million budget appropriation is still in committee in both houses, which is the normal process after a bill has been introduced on the floor.

President Eric A. Walker appeared before the House and Senate Appropriations Committees early in the session to present and justify the proposed budget. He also asked for an appropriation increase of $6 million.

If the appropriation isn't granted, Walker said, University tuition would have to be raised for the fall term.

A bill for the full $23 million was introduced in the Senate by Hays and in the House by Rep. Gene Fulmer, R-Centre. These bills are also in committee.

Yesterday Walker made a personal appeal in letters to Gov. David L. Lawrence and key members of the Senate and House asking them to use their leadership to get the $23 million appropriation.

Hays said last night he knew Walker's letter had been received in Harrisburg but had not yet heard any reactions to it.
