Foianini To Plea For More Funds

SGA President Dennis Foianini will travel to Harrisburg this morning for an interview with J. Dean Polen, chairman of the House of Representatives Appropriations Committee.

At the 9:30 meeting Foianini said he plans to present the problem of financial appropriations for the University from the point of view of the students and parents.

"This will be an expensive institution without the budget appropriation," Foianini said. "It will force some students to leave the University and keep other qualified students from entering."

Being a state school, Foianini said he feels that the University should provide education at a low cost.

At the present time the University is the third most expensive state school in the nation. With the expected increase, Foianini said, the cost may well surpass the second university and be out-ranked only by Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the most expensive state supported school in the nation.

Foianini will spend the morning and the major part of the afternoon in Harrisburg and will return for the special SGA meeting tomorrow evening at 7.

be conducted in collaboration with the community development department of Columbia and CARE, the information service reported.

CARE will donate approximately $100,000 in tools and equipment to the program, the service reported, and will provide supervisory personnel to aid the Columbian government in carrying out the development program.

Volunteers are scheduled to arrive in Columbia at the end of this summer and will work in small communities with Columbian workers in projects such as building schools, digging wells, providing recreation areas for children and participating in cooperative farm improvement work, the service reported.

The 64 volunteers will be jointly selected by the Peace Corps and CARE from applicants previously interviewed by the Peace Corps. For this project, however, only male volunteers will be considered, according to the service.

CARE will have the responsibility of training the volunteers both in the United States and in Columbia, the service reported.

Seniors Will Present Program Of Slides on University History

The senior class will stage a presentation of "For The Glory," a program of University history, at 9 p.m. June 9 in Schwab for all graduating seniors and their guests, Tim Nelligan, senior class gift chairman, said yesterday.

The program, originated by Michael R. Lynch, assistant professor of agriculture extension, includes colored slides of events in the history of the University. Lynch will narrate the production and the program will feature songs by the Penn State Glee Club, Nelligan said.

Lynch has presented this program throughout the country in conjunction with the Alumni Association, Nelligan said, and the program was also presented to Alumni Association class agents May 7.

The program will center on the four years which the class of '61 spent at the University, Nelligan said, and there will be a special series of slides showing their class gift, the recreation area constructed at Stone Valley.

Emphasis will also be placed on the fact that the class of '61 is the 100th class to graduate from the University, Nelligan said. He said that Lynch would explain to seniors about the activities of their predecessors in the class of 1861.

This is the first time in recent years that a program has been presented especially for seniors and their parents on Graduation Eve, Nelligan said.

Cool Temperatures Expected Today

Unseasonably cold air was expected to produce widespread frost in Central Pennsylvania early this morning. Temperatures were forecast to dip below freezing low spots around State College.

Unusually chilly weather for so late in spring should continue today and tonight, but sunny skies should produce somewhat milder temperatures tomorrow.

Today should be mostly cloudy, and a high of 56 degrees is expected. Partly cloudy and cool weather is forecast for tonight, and a low of 40 is likely.

Tomorrow's high should be near 64 degrees.

We really don't have anything against the Bellhop's Union. It's just that we're like most people—we don't like to carry luggage. We have a suggestion, rather than take all of your winter clothes home with you and make like a bellhop both coming and going, bring them to Balfurd's, we'll clean and press them, and store them for you until you're ready for them next fall! Makes sense?

NEWSTORY
"Tomorrow Is Too Late" is set to open at the Nittany Lion Drive-In Theatre in Boalsburg Thursday, May 25th.
Tomorrow Is Too Late is a first run showing for this area and has been rated by the National Legion of Decency as A-2 (morally unobjectionable for adults and adolescents).
Tomorrow Is Too Late stars Pier Angeli as Mirella and Vittorio DeSica as Landi, also starring in this remarkable film is Monique Van Vooren, who most of you remember as the "dumb blonde" actress of "Happy Anniversary."
Tomorrow Is Too Late tells the story of a girl who at 12 years of age grew into womanhood. Some of the great Hollywood columnists had this to say about Tomorrow Is Too Late: "Its frankness is startling . . . a highly inflammable subject . . . an honest answer to the eternal sex questionings of young people . . . a moving story of how great a tragedy ignorance of sex can be to young people."
Tomorrow Is Too Late should be seen by every mother and daughter, father and son alike. We recommend this picture highly as a must see picture on your entertainment list.
Tomorrow Is Too Late begins its engagement at the Nittany Lion Drive-In Theatre Thursday, May 25th and will play for a limited engagement.
Along with this picture we will be showing A Breath of Scandal. This fine attraction is in Technicolor and stars Sophia Loren, who you might remember as the gay, delightful lady in "It Started in Naples." Also with her in this picture, John Gavin who you may remember from "Midnight Lace."
Remember both these fine attractions start Thursday, May 25th at the Nittany Lion Drive-In Theatre, where you always see the finest in screen entertainment.
