

Pelton Defines CD Steps

By JOAN MEHAN
 In a civil defense alert the first concern of the authorities would be to gain control of the movements of students and faculty members, William C. Pelton, director of University security, said.

The circumstances of the alert would determine the procedures followed by the civil defense directors, Pelton continued. If there was enough time to get students back to their living areas this would be the most efficient method of control, Pelton said. IF THERE WAS not a sufficient amount of time, he said, both students and faculty members would be asked to remain in the building in which they were.

The State College civil defense director would take charge of the area and organize the disaster activities. The University would be under his jurisdiction, Pelton said.

If an alert should occur during class time, department heads would be notified of the situation by telephone and these people would notify the instructors teaching in the building of the type of disaster and the procedure to be followed, he said.

CIVIL DEFENSE communications would be transmitted over the radio so students would be asked to wait for instructions before taking any actions. Pelton said that telephone lines would only be open to authorized civil defense personnel.

The University is divided into seven committees which would go into action as soon as a state of emergency is declared, he said.

THERE ARE ALSO food service, medical, first aid and utilities committees. A registration group has been organized and would go into action if refugees were brought to campus. A radiology committee will measure radioactive fallout if any should be present.

Housing Applications Reviewed by Dean

Applications for exemption from the University's transfer housing ruling are now being judged by the Dean of Men and William H. Hassler, assistant dean of men, Frank J. Simes, dean of men, said yesterday.

The secretary who had been "automatically approving" applications last week is no longer approving them, he said.

Simes said that the University's attitude has recently become "more liberal" toward giving exemptions because the dormitories will probably be full in the fall. "A student still has to have a good reason to get an exemption though," he said.

THE SECRETARY who was giving exemptions automatically misunderstood what she was supposed to do, Simes said. "I gave her permission to approve all the forms we had previously received but rejected," he said. The applicants all had good reasons, he said, "they were borderline cases."

Any further applications will be checked closely, Simes said. There will be no applications given without justifications, he added.

Under University policy, all upperclassmen transferring or changing assignment from a Commonwealth Campus to this campus must live in a residence hall for a year. Exemptions are made to only those students who have a "valid" excuse for living downtown.

Among the excuses accepted as valid are financial difficulties, health problems and being married.

THE RULING was the cause of much controversy last year when it was opposed by the SGA. It came under fire recently when three Collegian reporters, posing as transfer students, were assured by a secretary in the Dean of Men's office that they would be exempted.

The only reason they gave for wanting the exemption was that they thought it would be cheaper to live downtown. Simes had previously said that this was not a valid excuse.

Police Investigate Possible Robbery At Electric Store

Robbery might have been the motive behind a shattered door glass discovered early yesterday by a local merchant, State College Police Chief J. R. Juba said yesterday.

A glass panel in the rear door of The Electric Supply Co., 216 South Allen Street, was found shattered yesterday morning. R. L. Fisher, manager of the store, said that the door was ajar when he went into the basement at 8 a.m.

FISHER REPORTED that he has not found anything missing from either the basement stockroom or the display room on the first floor. He said that the hooks, which were used to fasten the door, were broken.

Juba said that the object used to break the glass was wielded with considerable force, as glass from the pane was found 15 feet or more away from the door.

The object which was used has not been located, but Juba indicated that it was rather large since the hooks were broken from its impact.

IT IS POSSIBLE, Juba said, that the heavy object fell down the stairs leading to the stockroom door. The police are treating the case as an entry and the investigation is underway, he said.

Fisher said that the store had been burglarized six months ago, and the method of entry was very similar in appearance to this recent incident.

Grad Students--

Ciavarella said that a number of his associates had decided not to attend the University because they could not take enough credits and because the 10-week term was too long to be in school for a person who might only want to take 3 credits.

Past summer sessions were broken down into three 6-week and two 3-week sessions. Under this arrangement the students could take 6 credits during a 6-week session, and 3 credits during a 3-week session. The maximum then was 12 credits.
