ARTISTS AT WORK—These girls are taking advantage of the good weather to move their easels outdoors. Many other students wish they could follow the girls' example but can not as their courses do not lend themselves to outdoor instruction. Beverly Shearer, junior in art education from Windber, and Linda Fry, sophomore in applied art from Lock Haven are having a class in water color painting.

Fulmer to Hit Tax Proposal

By MAXINE FINE

Rep. Eugene M. Fulmer, R-Centre, said last night that he would not vote for the 2 per cent tax on rents, royalties and dividends in its present form.

This bill, which was proposed by the Governor's special bi-partisan committee on education, is scheduled for consideration in the House sometime next week.

Fulmer said he found little enthusiasm among his constituents for a bill that would place a tax on dividends from savings. "There are those who feel we should not penalize thrift," he added.

WHEN THE BILL reaches the floor of the House, he said, there is a good possibility that several amendments will be proposed to redefine certain parts that will exclude taxes to be paid on dividends from savings and loans.

In an attempt to make his position clear in this matter, Fulmer said that "there isn't any education tax, contrary to what the Governor repeatedly says." There is no such thing as a tax which is earmarked solely for education, he added.

There are two present funds, he continued, the highway fund budget and the general fund budget. If the bill is passed, revenue from it would go into the latter fund. It would then be up to the General Assembly to make all the necessary appropriations.

IN THE OTHER HALF of the assembly, Sen. Jo Hays, D-Centre, said he felt the bill stands a better chance for passage because he believes that the House thinks education has some needs.

Hays said he was not aware of any talk to amend the bill. He added, however, that if any amendments cut down its possible revenue by a substantial amount the bill would be worthless.

Hays is chairman of the Governor's committee which proposed this bill, among others, for education.

IN COMMENTING on any possible substitutions if this bill is not passed, Fulmer said that he and the Speaker of the House have been working for some weeks to get the Sales and Used Tax Bureau to take action on a resolution to obtain information on items which are not taxed now either by law or regulation. They could replace the ones called for in the 2 per cent tax bill.

Thus far no report has been received from the Bureau. "Apparently, he added, the Administration does not see fit to provide us with this information."

Campus Directors Propose Change For Admissions

(See Related Editorial)

A proposed change in the new admission policy for several of the University's Commonwealth Campuses was presented to the University Senate yesterday by Campus directors.

The resolution asks for the admittance of high school graduates below the first-fifth of their class to the Campuses on an experimental basis in the summer terms.

THIS RESOLUTION and two others passed by directors of the Commonwealth Campuses at the Behrend Campus Workshop meeting on July 18 and 19 were referred to the Senate Committee on Education.

Dr. Robert G. Bernreuter, secretary of the Senate and dean of admissions, said that the change in policy was requested because the directors felt that the Campuses were functioning as "community colleges" and should not be held to the regulations of the University Park.

BEGINNING THIS FALL, Bernreuter said, the University will admit without examination only Pennsylvania residents who were in the first-fifth of their graduating class. This summer, he added, the policy is as it has been in the past—Pennsylvania students in the first and second fifths of their class have been admitted without examinations.

The other resolutions passed by the directors asked that an Associate degree be conferred to indicate successful completion of a minimum of 60 credits in an approved program of collegiate level above the secondary school and that a maximum number of credits to earn an Associate degree be established.

'Raid' Results in Arrests

The State Liquor Control Board arrested six University students at The Townhouse Friday night when an "open inspection" revealed 12 minors present among the 160 patrons.

The 6 arrested students were "caught drinking beer" a Borough official said yesterday and they will be called in for a hearing within the next week.

If the students plead guilty to the charges of entering and being served at an establishment licensed by the Liquor Control Board, the fine will be a minimum of $25 plus $9 costs, Justice of the Peace William P. Bell said yesterday.

The six officials from the Liquor Control Board in Altoona were assisted by the State College Borough police in the "open inspection" Friday night.

THE INVESTIGATORS will make a report to the Liquor Control Board and from that evidence presented the licensee may have its liquor permit revoked.

The Liquor Control Board "has no case against the minors but against the licensee," an official said.

The six students violated a Borough Ordinance which states that "it is unlawful for minors to enter or be served on any premises in the Borough of State College, licensed by the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board."

THE MANAGER and owner of the Townhouse, George Homich, said that all matriculation and selective service cards are checked at the door.

Homich said he thought only three had been arrested and that "apparently these three cards weren't checked."

LeRoy S. Austin, assistant to the dean of men, said that at present no disciplinary action is planned against the students. He said that they will "wait and see what action is taken by the police and State Liquor Control Board."

AUSTIN SAID that the dean of men's office has not yet been given the names of the students involved in the liquor violation.

The names of the students will probably be released after the hearing early next week, Justice of the Peace William P. Bell said.

155 Corpsmen Begin Training

By DOTI DRASHER
Registration, orientation and education for the Philippine Peace Corps project began over the weekend in an intensive seven-week training program for 155 Peace Corps volunteers on campus.

The Peace Corps volunteers hailing from 42 states will be trained as teachers aides for English and science in the rural areas of the central Philippine Islands.

Their 60-hour-a-week, 6-day-a-week training program is directed by Dr. Paul W. Bixby, assistant to the dean of the college of education.

AS STUDENTS WERE checking in and registering over the weekend they each received a tag with their name and state.

At the "get acquainted" social hour on Sunday one often heard "Oh, you're from California too" or "Did you go to Michigan State?" It didn't take long for the volunteers to meet each other.

BUT THE GREATEST interest centered on two Filipino women. The volunteers eagerly asked them dozens of questions.

Miss Pepito Jimenez, one of the Filipino women, said, at the first group meeting Monday, that she thought the volunteers at the present time had "only a vague idea of what they would do, but yet were very willing to go."

THE FIRST ORIENTATION talk was given Tuesday evening by a Peace Corps representative from Washington, Robert Van Dyne, deputy director for Peace Corps programs and orientation.

One of the topics Van Dyne stressed was that their work as Peace Corps volunteers in the Philippines would demonstrate a "giving of yourself in the true sense."

The Education program for the trainees began Monday with lectures on Philippine culture and history, U.S. history and teaching English and science.

They will also begin their practical training in first aid and will receive physical conditioning for the climate this weekend at Stone Valley camp.

Studies Disclose Parking Revenue Climbs in Boro

Despite the free night parking experiment in the downtown area, recent studies revealed that the Borough parking revenue actually increased in comparison to the same four-month period last year, when meters were in effect every evening.

The experiment in free night parking which began April 1 ended Tuesday and studies of the results of the experiment are now being completed.

THE OFFICIAL revenue reports showed that the increase in revenue from April to June was $1,179.60.

The downtown parking meters are again collecting nickels but merchants in the area agreed at a recent committee meeting of the Chamber of Commerce to seek a renewal of the free meter parking at night.

The increase in parking revenue was attributed in part to the number of conventions at the University this summer, to the increased traffic due to the enrollment of more students for the summer term and to the three new parking lots in the downtown area.

THE FREE NIGHT trial parking was part of the downtown merchants plan to help compete with the all day free parking at the new shopping centers outside the Borough.

Further reports on the parking revenue are expected to give such information as how long any one car remained parked in a specific area when free meter parking was in effect.

The results of the trial period are expected to be presented at the Borough Council meeting on Monday.
