

Therapy Program To End Next Week

By BOBBI BOTWICK

An intensive program for children with speech and hearing defects is now drawing to a close. For six weeks this summer children ranging in age from 8 to 18 have been undergoing an intensive speech therapy program.

The primary purpose of the program is to help the children with their speech problems and also to aid in their physical, social, and emotional development, Dr. Asa Berlin, director of the program, said yesterday.

THE PROGRAM includes individual therapy, speech practice groups, mental hygiene classes, speech activities classes, and art classes, he said.

In addition to the therapy program there is also a planned recreation program. The children enjoy three swimming classes a week, picnics every Sunday afternoon, miniature golf, movies, a trip to a cave and guest speakers plus games such as croquet and volleyball, Berlin said. This planned recreation is still part of an enforced speech program, he added.

The children are selected on the basis of general maturity, ability, and motivation Berlin said. Those who have a physical handicap, who are retarded, or who can be handled locally are not accepted for this program, he added. "Only those individuals who can really be helped are selected," Berlin said.

THE FORTY CHILDREN are divided into three groups according to their ages. Each group with the help of a counsellor gives a party one Friday night during the summer.

As part of their speech therapy program some of the children are given assignments to call or speak to people in town or on campus to gather some type of information. Berlin said that this gives them a chance to practice speaking and also enables them to get over the fear of talking to people.

This program will end next week with a banquet and late night party for all the children at the Sigma Nu fraternity. At that time their yearbook will be given out. It is written by all of the participants in the program.

27 Teachers Here to Attend Journ Seminar

Twenty-seven high school teachers from Pennsylvania and five nearby states are attending a three-week seminar on high school journalism which started Friday and will continue through Aug. 18.

The University is one of 10 participating in this program, which is conducted on a grant from the Newspaper Fund, a subsidiary of the Wall Street Journal.

This is the third year that such a program has been held here. It is under the supervision of Eugene Goodwin, director of the School of Journalism.

The seminar will cover various phases of journalism and communications. Sessions are scheduled on news writing, editing, newspaper production, advertising, broadcasting, law and ethics of journalism, the mass communications concept and financing school publications.

Student canes were a common sight on this campus around the turn of the century.

Band to Give Concert Tonight

The summer band will present a concert of music by Richard Rodgers, George Kenny, John Philip Sousa and others at 8:30 tonight in Schwab.

The concert is the last program to be presented by the summer music training school for high school students.

The 70 students participating in the five-week program receive professional training in band, orchestra, chorus, music theory and private lessons on an instrument of their choice.

James W. Dunlop, professor of music education, will conduct the summer band. The program will include selections from "The Sound of Music" by Richard Rodgers, "Polaris Concert March" by George Kenny, "The Stars and Stripes Forever" by John Philip Sousa and other band music. Several numbers from the Pennsylvania Music Education Association Band Festival program for 1961-62 will also be presented.
