

Senate Committee Disciplines 2 Men

One student was placed on suspended suspension and another withdrew from the University as a result of action taken by the Senate Sub-committee on Discipline last week.

A junior in arts and letters who caused a disturbance at the football game with Navy was placed on suspended suspension, Daniel R. Leasure, assistant to the dean of men, said.

A student on suspended suspension may be suspended from the University immediately by the dean of men if any further misconduct occurs.

The student, a minor, was intoxicated, Leasure said. The disturbance started, Leasure explained, when the student purchased a pennant from a vendor at the game and then took three others.

When the student was caught by a campus patrolman he was very uncooperative and used abusive language, Leasure said.

The second student, a sophomore in business administration, was caught stealing while staying at a fraternity, Leasure said. The student was a transfer student and living in the fraternity under the 3-week fraternity tryout program, he explained.

Fraternity members reported that he stole $12 in cash, two shirts, plus a number of small items, such as a pair of socks and a shoehorn, Leasure said.

The student was immediately referred to the University psychiatrist because he "demonstrated unusual behavior," Leasure said.

The psychiatrist reported that the student did not have a character disorder but did demonstrate a high degree of immaturity, Leasure reported.

Because of this report, Leasure said, the sub-committee decided to give the student an opportunity to withdraw from the University without any formal disciplinary action being taken against him.

The student accepted the sub-committee's recommendations and withdrew from the University, he said.

Thanksgiving Recess--

Bernreuter said students attending the University have a "big investment" in their grades and a recess would be too great a "risk" on their part.

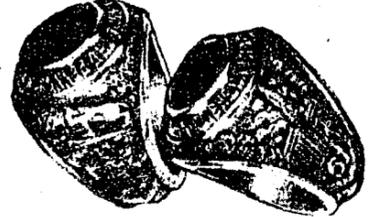

Final examinations, formerly scheduled for one week under the semester system, have not been slated for a definite period. It is expected that they will be given during the last class period on either Dec. 6 or 7, the end of the fall term.

Cutler said he had sent letters to the assistant deans of the colleges reminding them that no recess, except for Thanksgiving Day, has been scheduled. He said he also reminded the Senate Procedures Committee, so that they are "aware of the fact."

"The schedule involves a change of habits," Cutler said. This must be understood.

If Read's committee brought the issue up for a vote in the University Senate, and it passed, "my office would worry about the administrative problems then," Cutler said.

Parking along the curb on the west side of Shortlidge Rd., between Curtin and Pollock Rds., was discontinued yesterday.
